Urges price controls on domestic oil

Gas hikes are huge windfalls for oil firms: Nader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Saturday that recent gasoline price increases are providing domestic oil companies with a huge windfall profit.

In a statement, Nader said President Ford's $2 per barrel tariff on imported oil is only partly responsible for price increases.

Another important ingredient, Nader said, is a $2 per barrel increase in the price of American oil which is not price controlled. This, Nader charged, "enables domestic oil producers to reap a $2-billion windfall profit."

Federal energy officials said Tuesday they expect gasoline prices to rise by 3 to 5 cents per gallon this summer. Increases have been announced during the week by various major companies.

The increases had been expected, energy officials said, and they characterized the increases as largely seasonal. They said refineries are increasing their production of gasoline after a period in which stocks in hand had declined.

In addition to his statement, Nader sent letters to chairmen Henry M. Jackson of the Senate Interior Committee and Harley O. Staggers of the House Commerce Committee. He urged them to work for price controls on domestic oil.

Nader charged that Ford's tariff on imported oil will not reduce consumption of imports as oil users cannot shift their purchases to domestic oil because domestic production has not increased.

And the tariff will not decrease over-all oil consumption, Nader said, because oil companies were allowed to delay the price increases until periods of peak consumer demand when cuts in fuel usage in response to price hikes would be minimized.

Hence, Nader said, the only way the tariff will cut oil consumption is by deepening the recession.

Law to curb gun dealers looms

By Ford

U.S. help pledged for Asia

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Ford told visiting President Suharto of Indonesia on Saturday that the American setbacks in Indochina have served to redouble U.S. interest in the stability of Southeast Asia.

Ford pledged a continuing active U.S. role in the region after of what he described as a "most enjoyable and most constructive" meeting here with Suharto.

In a luncheon toast, Ford praised Suharto as a "wise and valued friend of the United States" and then he gave forceful assurances that Indonesia and other American allies in the area can count on a continued U.S. presence.

"The tragedies in Indochina should redouble, and does, our interest in the stability of Southeast Asia," Ford said.

His remarks were seen as a warning to Communist powers in Asia not to attempt a further expansion of their influence.

Since the fall of South Vietnam 10 weeks ago, Ford has personally relayed similar assurances to leaders of Singapore, Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

Unlike some U.S. allies in Asia which have been reassessing their ties with Washington, Indonesia appears to see a continued strong American presence in the area as essential.

Suharto, who met with Ford for three hours at this mountain retreat on the fourth leg of a five-nation foreign tour, praised the "open and frank exchange of views" with the American president.

PRESIDENT'S NEW POOL

Confessing he "felt very embarrassed," President Ford nevertheless Saturday went for a dip in his new $66,840 pool at the White House and rested after he swam five laps for newsmen.

Plan high license fees for handgun sellers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gun control legislation being prepared by the Ford administration probably will contain a measure aimed at reducing the number of gun dealers in the country, an administration source said Saturday night.

"The proposal is to make the license fee for dealers high enough so many would find it prohibitive to deal in guns, especially the fly-by-nights who sell Saturday night specials," the source said.

He said presently there are about 150,000 gun dealers in the country and it is hoped the administration proposal, which will be sent to Congress next week, will reduce that number to about 40,000.

The last gun control bill provided federal licensing for dealers who imported parts from outside the country, he noted. In addition, many dealers are licensed by states. The measure under consideration would require all dealers to be licensed federally.

In his crime message sent to Congress June 19, President Ford said he was "unalterably opposed" to federal registration of guns or gun owners.

Ford said in that message he wanted to ban the manufacture, assembly and sale of the cheap handguns known as Saturday night specials.

He also said he would propose tightening the licensing requirements for gun dealers and establishing a waiting period between the purchase of a gun and delivery to the buyer.

Israeli rioters attack Arabs in reprisal for bomb deaths

JERUSALEM (AP) — Riot police used a water cannon Saturday to beat back several hundred stone-throwing Israelis who tried to take reprisals on Arabs for a terrorist bomb that killed 13 persons.

The rioters smashed several police car windows and a few policemen received bruises and cuts from the hail of rocks, but no arrests were reported.

The Israelis tried to invade a row of Arab watermelon stands on the old border dividing east and west Jerusalem after police announced that an Israeli family of three — a father, mother and 9-year-old daughter — were killed in the bomb explosion Friday. Two Arabs — a man and a woman — also were killed in the blast.

The bomb was packed in an old refrigerator and left in front of a toy store on Jerusalm's busiest street. Seventytwo persons were injured in the explosion, the worst in the Holy City in recent memory. A Palestinian guerrilla group in Lebanon claimed credit for it.

Meanwhile, Israel's leaders prepared for a crucial cabinet session which could decide Israel's stance on peace negotiations.

The Israeli ambassador to Washington, Simcha Dinitz, briefed Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Foreign Minister Yigal Allon on his talks with American leaders on Egyptian proposals for another interim settlement in the Sinai Desert.

The cabinet meets Sunday to debate Israel's response to Egyptian demands for withdrawal from two strategic Sinai passes, but was seeking clarifications both from the Americans and from the Egyptians before making a decision.

Dinitz was reported to be carrying some of the answers to Israeli questions, but it was not known if the cabinet would decide the Israeli position Sunday or postpone a decision until more information was available.

Israel wants to know where exactly Egypt proposes the Israel and Egyptian front lines run, and whether the Egyptians will permit the Israelis to maintain early warning radar stations in the Mitla and Gidi passes after an Israeli withdrawal from them.

Israel is also seeking assurances that the United States will not pressure Israel into further withdrawal soon after an agreement with Egypt is signed, and that American arms aid requested by the Israelis will be forthcoming after the agreement.

High-paying posts for his friends

State controller Cory named in job scandal

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State Controller Ken Cory appointed relatives and associates of his campaign contributors as inheritance tax referees, two Sacramento newspapers said today.

The Sacramento Bee and Sacramento Union said the appointments included the son of a man who contributed $5,000 to Cory's campaign last year, and a woman whose family contributed $4,900.

The Bee also said Cory's appointments to the potentially lucrative jobs included campaign workers or associates of such Democratic officials as state Treasurer Jesse Unruh and Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy.

Cory and a top aide, Carl D'Agostino, were quoted as denying any wrong doing.

"In none of the appointments has there been a quid pro quo arrangement," D'Agostino said.

The referees appraise property of dead persons so counties can figure the inheritance tax. A small portion of each appraisal goes to the referee.

Prospective referees are interviewed by the controller's office and take a test. State law bars appointment of anyone who contributed to any candidate for controller.

A judge in Stockton has ordered removal of one of the new referees, Antoinette McGillivray, whose brother and daughter gave Cory's 1974 campaign a total of $4,900.

Cory is due in court July 16 in a lawsuit claiming the appointment was illegal. He termed the suit "obviously specious."

Cory also said he did not ask any of the potential referees which party they belonged to. He said he would prefer to have the referees chosen under civil service and introduced a bill as an assemblyman that would have done that.

According to articles in the Bee and Union, and researched by two Los Angeles Daily Journal reporters, the other new referees include:

—Albert Nicora, 20, a Stanford University student, whose father, Vincent, contributed $5,000 to Cory's campaign.

—Karen Roberts, 22, of Oakland, whose father, Hiawatha Roberts, contributed $700 to Cory.

D'Agostino said he was aware of Nicora's gift, and described his son as "an extremely bright kid." He said he did not know of Roberts' contribution.

Pomonan a winner: $126,612

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — A semi-retired 65-year-old Pomona man Saturday collected his record $126,612.60 winnings that he won in Caliente race track's 5-10 betting pool last month.

Ernest Martin said he had been unable to pick up the money won June 15 because his wife Alice had become ill on a trip to Cleveland, Ohio.

He was the only person to pick all six winners in the pool and put down a $640 wager on his selections to produce what a track spokesman said was the biggest 5-10 payoff ever at the track.

Boy, 2, shoots himself in the chest

A two-year-old boy is being held for observation at San Antonio Community Hospital at Upland after he shot himself in the chest with a .22 cal. revolver with which he was playing.

Robert Lee McGaugh Jr., son of Bobby Lee McGaugh, 737 N. Palmetto Ave., Ontario, had been left Saturday morning in a bedroom by his parents.

The child took a gun from a dresser drawer and played with it until it accidentally discharged, and the bullet went through the boy's upper right chest, broke a rib in its downward motion, and exited in the back portion of the right shoulder.

McGaugh said that he and his wife heard what sounded like a firecracker, and headed for the bedroom. They were met by the youngster who had blood on his shirt.

McGaugh said that the gun belonged to his father-in-law, and was kept in the dresser drawer.

Strikes, settlements dot U.S. labor scene

The nation's labor scene during the Fourth of July holiday was a mixture of an apparent settlement of a state employes strike in Pennsylvania, a temporary reinstatement of sanitationmen in New York City and continued walkouts in Connecticut, Santa Clara County, Calif., and Atlanta.

In Harrisburg, Pa., leaders of the state's largest employe union met Saturday to make a final decision on a new two-year wage agreement designed to end strike by 46,000 state workers that began Tuesday.

New York City sanitationmen spent the holiday cleaning the streets of some 50,000 tons of garbage piled up during their wildcat walkout. Sporadic stoppages were reported Saturday in the collection of trash at parks and beaches as some laid-off maintenance workers continued to interfere with the movement of parks department sanitation trucks.

In Connecticut, some 11,000 workers remained off the job, 10,000 of them at a nuclear shipbuilding plant at Groton which constructs nuclear submarines for the U.S. Navy. It was the state's biggest strike in 15 years.

Construction workers in Atlanta entered the fifth day of their walkout. Members of the Laborers International Union rejected a 95-cent hourly pay increase over two years.

Argentina rocked by labor strike

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Isabel Peron summoned her cabinet into special session Saturday to discuss a 48-hour general strike called by Argentina's organized labor movement to support demands for higher wages and cabinet changes.

Raul Lastiri, who as president of the house of representatives is first in the line of presidential succession, reportedly met with the cabinet. There was no official information on the meeting itself.

The 3-million member General Labor Confederation (CGT) called the strike, to begin at midnight Sunday, after pleading unsuccessfully with Mrs. Peron to reverse her decision rolling back wage agreements. Some provided salary hikes of up to 130 per cent.

"Five hundred times we presented ourselves and 500 times we were rejected," said confederation chief Casildo Herreras.

Confederation spokesmen said the strike was called against the policies of Mrs. Peron, not against the president herself. But they warned Mrs. Peron of a serious rupture in the labor movement that has been the backbone of the Peronist movement.

Eight days of intense labor-government negotiations preceded the CGT call for a general strike. Separate strikes already have idled many industries.

Peronist youth leaders and some Peronist congressmen have called for the resignations of Social Welfare Minister Jose Lopez Rega and Economy Minister Celestino Rodrigo.

The 38,000-man federal police force was on full alert for possible renewed terrorist bombings. An early morning bomb Saturday wounded a policeman and two bystanders in a residential area of Buenos Aires.

In a separate development, federal police sources said French journalist Edouard Balby was being held for questioning but would give no other information.

Witnesses said Balby, a Latin American affairs writer for the Paris magazine L'Express, was picked up at his downtown hotel Thursday night by three plainclothes policemen.

Japanese leader awaits Ford summit

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Takeo Miki said Saturday his summit meeting next month with President Ford is of vital importance because of the "drastic changes" in Asia.

Miki, replying to questions during a nationally televised news conference, said that his talks with Ford "will help contribute not only to U.S.-Japan relations but to the world as a whole."

The Japanese leader cited the situation on the Korean peninsula, the "necessity of cooperation" between industrialized nations and the importance of dialogue between resource producing and consuming countries as likely topics to come up during the Washington summit scheduled for early August.

The "drastic changes" in Asia he spoke of included the the U.S. withdrawals from Cambodia and South Vietnam following Communist victories in April.

The news conference followed the close of the 75th regular session of Parliament — the first for Miki as premier, where a number of his key legislative proposals were either rejected, shelved or passed in watered down versions

The 67-year-old Miki also suffered a setback in a public opinion survey published Saturday by the mass circulation Asahi Shimbun. His support dropped to 34 per cent, down from 45 per cent in an Asahi poll taken last December after he assumed the premiership.

Political observers noted that his trip to the United States, which precedes the October visit by Emperor Hirohito, may be used by Miki to strengthen his tenous hold on the faction-ridden, ruling Liberal Democrats.

"During my visit to the United States, I hope we can understand each other better and recognize the world issues," he said.

But before leaving for Washington, Miki said he will send Foreign Minister Kiichi Miyazawa to confer with officials in Seoul because the "security of South Korea and that of Japan are closely interwoven."

Turning to China and the drawnout negotiations over a peace and friendship treaty, he said the accord could be hammered out once "both sides come back on the right track from technical details."

One of these details is the "anti-hegemony" clause insisted on by the Chinese and believed aimed at the Soviet Union. The Japanese don't want to upset their relations with Moscow and have opposed the Chinese wording of the clause.

"Hegemony means power politics," Miki said. "Therefore, to refuse hegemony is one basic rule for peace. It does not imply any certain country and I believe Chinese leaders know what I mean."

Venezuela's takeover of oil industry won't change policy

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuela's oil industry will be administered by a new state company following nationalization, but the doors will remain open for ample cooperation with multinational companies, President Carlos Andres Perez said Saturday.

The company, Petroven, will administer approximately 20 other state firms which will conserve the basic organization structure employed by the score of foreign firms which now operate the nation's 2.5 million-barrel-a day industry, Perez said.

The president spoke in an hour-long address, broadcast and televised nationwide, marking the 164th anniversary of Venezuela's independence from Spain.

Perez, who has promised to nationalize the oil industry before the end of the year, assured Venezuelans that the industry, once nationalized, will not be affected by partisan politics or any other influences, including "covert or open pressure or privilege of transnational entities."

Venezuela's two-house congress currently is debating a government bill calling for total nationalization of the industry in return for compensation which would not exceed net book value of company assets.

Congressional sources have indicated that the bill could be approved by mid-August. It would take affect when signed by Perez.

"The nationalization of petroleum is a sovereign act of national will, constitutionally based," Perez said. "It is not an act of aggression against foreign interests or countries, but rather the clear and simple exercise of permanent sovereignty of a free country over its natural resources."

Insurance adjusters jam Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The heaviest-hit Strip casinos were still digging out Saturday from deposits of mud and wrecked autos left by Thursday's flash flooding, the area's worst in 20 years.

The flood's aftermath also has the area knee-deep with insurance adjusters who are working on claims for the hundreds of cars set adrift and overturned by the rampaging torrents through the downtown streets.

"It seemed to me that our guests just took it as something that went with the excitement of the state," said Caesers Palace manager Jerry Gordon.

FAA seeks cause of copter crash

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration prepared Saturday to try to determine the cause of a helicopter crash on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation.

The helicopter, leased by the FBI for use in a search of the reservation for 16 suspects sought in the shooting deaths of two FBI agents last week, crash-landed Friday night three miles northwest of Pine Ridge.

There were two FBI agents and two crewmen aboard the Sikorsky S55B model helicopter when it went down about 7:30 p.m., said FBI spokesman Clay Brady. He said no one was injured and the helicopter landed upright.

The FBI established a 300-yard perimeter around the wreckage Saturday and was allowing no one into the area.

Brady said the cause of the crash is unknown. But an FBI spokesman in Washington said the crash apparently was the result of a mechanical problem. "It looks like it just conked out," he said.

The chopper was one of three being used by the FBI in its search of the sprawling reservation. Two fixed-wing aircraft are also being used in the search.

Rites are held for cyclist

Funeral services were held Saturday for Steven W. Fikes, a motorcyclist injured in a June 22 accident at Ontario Motor Speedway.

The death of Fikes was the first fatality at OMS since the track opened in September, 1970.

Draper Mortuary, Ontario, handled interim funeral arrangements but services were held in Fresno. Fikes' parents reside in the Fresno area.

Public workers picket for fifth straight day

Striking public employes in Santa Clara County and Palo Alto stayed on the picket line for the fifth day Saturday forcing the curtailment of some government services.

In Palo Alto a few incidents of strike-related vandalism were reported on the Fourth of July. Police said glue was put on locks to several city pools so that openings were delayed until late afternoon. They also said roofing tacks were strewn on the driveway of the city treatment plant, toilets were plugged up at two parks and sprinkler heads were pulled up at the yard of the city animal shelter.

Gary Fazzino, a city strike information officer, said disciplinary action will be taken against the vandals if they are identified. He said otherwise things were quiet with pickets marching in front of city buildings. He said some libraries would be reopened Monay but a few city activities, such as swimming registration, would be postponed.

Palo Alto city workers and Santa Clara County employes struck last Tuesday in separate disputes over higher wages.

Three unions representing about 7,500 of Santa Clara's 10,000 county workers continued to strike despite threats of dismissal and a court order calling the job action illegal.

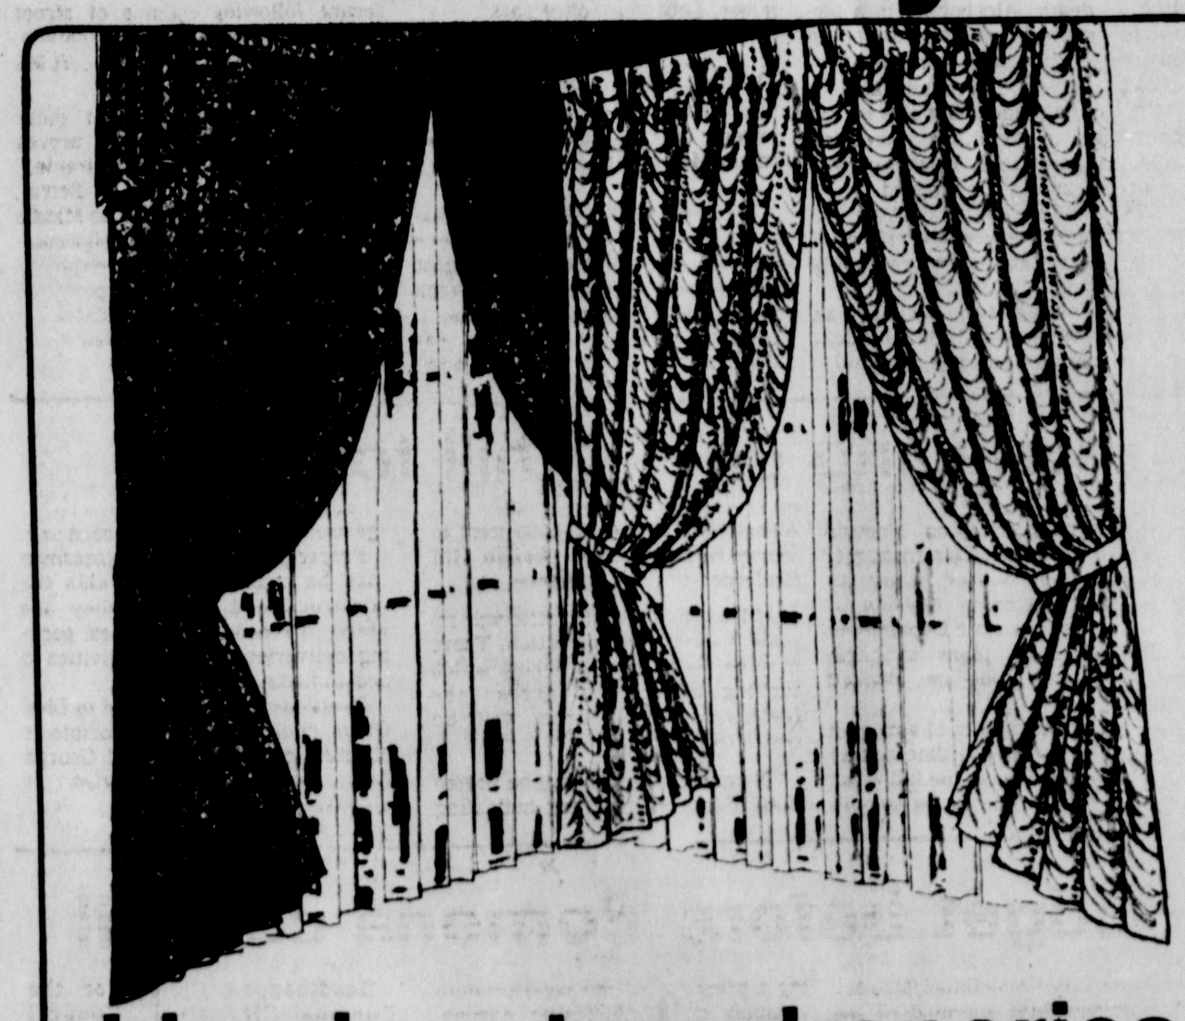

The unions planned a mass membership meeting Sunday night to map strategy. They said bus drivers affiliated with Local 625 of the Amalgamated Transit Union will abandon their vehicles Monday and join the strike.

The county Board of Supervisors planned to hold an executive session Monday to decide whether to resume negotiations, according to county informatin officer Dick Cox.

About 5,000 county employes are striking to press demands for an 11 per cent wage increase — four per cent more than the county had offered.

The county hospital emergency room remained closed over the weekend since the strike includes nurses, dieticians, clerical workers and janitors.

Misuse of tax $$

Jobless funds fuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some federal tax dollars intended to create public service jobs are going to pay staff workers for private groups such as the Red Cross, Salvation Army and church and charitable organizations.

Two high Labor Department officials disagree over whether this use of federal money is proper.

The Labor Department's chief investigator, Frank Yeager, says the practice violated department regulations and the spirit of the law when it was begun several years ago. The law has since been changed but he says it is "an open question" whether the practice is now proper.

Yeager also criticized the Manpower Administration, which administers federal public service funds, for failing to enforce its own regulations. However, manpower chief William H. Kolberg disputed Yeager's interpretation of the law and said the use of public service employes by private groups is in line with department policy.

This indicated the practice may be common nationwide, but no nationwide figures on the subject are available.

Yeager said in an internal report that a spot check last year of two cities, San Diego, Calif. and Seattle, Wash., uncovered 97 public service workers who actually were working for private groups in jobs which "did not provide a direct benefit to the general public."

Furthermore, the 97 were officially listed as having such jobs as "community development specialist" or "community service representative," when in fact they were working in such jobs as janitor, public relations worker, typist, truck driver, or programmer for private groups.

In San Diego the groups included the Red Cross, Salvation Army, Federation of Women's Organizations, Chicano Federation, United Community Services, Jewish Community Center, Young Mens Christian Association, and others. In Seattle they including a church-run group distributing food to the needy. Four Seattle workers were getting federal salaries to work for the same groups that had employed them earlier.

Yeager's report is based on a review of employment records from 1971, and 1972 and 1973. The review was completed in April of last year, preliminary verions of the report were circulated privately in the Labor Department in December, and the final version was completed this year and cleared for public release June 10, although no public release was made. The Associated Press sought and obtained a copy from Yeager, who did not criticize the agencies themselves, but rather use of federal money to support them.

Kolberg declined The AP's requests for an interview.

In a letter released with Yeager's report, Kolberg said "it is our feeling that the cases cited by the report ... do not constitute violations ... Program agents may provide indirect support to community-service organizations.

Yeager disagreed. "In our opinion, these (Labor Department) guidelines and the intent of the act were violated," he said.

Kolberg also said the department's chief lawyer had said in a written opinion in 1971 that the department would not question the judgment of states or cities that chose to use federal public-service money to hire workers for private, nonprofit groups. Kolberg quoted the department's solicitor as saying, "if the employing unit of government thinks the work to be performed by its employes in such outstationed position is public service, we would not look behind that decision."

Yet Yeager said this legal opinion should not apply "in cases of clear-cut violations" such as the San Diego and Seattle cases. "On the contrary, the secretary must, by congressional dictate, insure that all expenditures meet legal requirements established by federal law.

The 97 workers cited by Yeager were among 400,000 hired under the $2.25-billion Emergency Employment Act of 1971, which contained no authorization for private groups to receive federal funds directly. The 97 were hired by the cities and farmed out, or "outstationed", to the private groups.

Under the present law enacted at the end of 1973, private, nonprofit groups may receive federal public-service job money through states and cities to hire public service workers. But Yeager said in an interview it is still an "open question" whether the kinds of janitorial and public relations job he uncovered would fit the legal definition of public service.

For executive's chauffeurs

Anti-kidnapping driving course

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Millionaires who fear abduction might be want their chauffeurs to be escape artists.

That's what Bob Bondurant thinks and that's why he's charging $412.50 for a "corporate driving course" to teach chauffeurs of wealthy executives how to outrun potential kidnapers.

Bondurant said he designed the three-day "anti-kidnaper" course a year ago at the request of the security manager for a giant oil company.

Chauffeurs are taught how to shake a pursuer, including use of a controlled skid which will turn their car completely around and head it in the opposite direction.

"The whole point of this course is to keep the car on the road and keep it moving," said race driver Ron Southern. "It may be that they have to get into a situation where they'll have to use the whole car — all two or three tons of it — in a hell of a hurry. Obviously we hope not, but the possibility is always there."

Dangers are terrific, says expert

Teen problem: it's alcohol, not dope

DENVER (AP) — Alcoholism is the "No. 1 drug problem among teenagers today," and parents who are relieved that their children use booze instead of dope are only fooling themselves, a California psychiatrist says.

Dr. William Rader of St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach said Saturday that alcoholism among the young will continue as long as "positive drink images" are made by peers, parents and the media.

Rader, an expert on alcoholism in teen-agers and women, made his remarks at a press conference in conjunction with the 40th Alcoholics Anonymous convention.

"Parents feel comfortable that their kids aren't taking dope," Rader said. "They know drinking is legal and they may have alcohol in their own homes.

"But the dangers of it are terrific. We're seeing 12-year-olds in AA. Just think about what that means."

According to Rader, 5 per cent of all seniors in American high schools are involved to some extent in alcohol use. Half a million teenagers in the United States are alcoholics, he said, but few are getting help to deal with their problem.

Families of alcoholic teenagers often refuse to acknowledge that a problem exists, Rader said.

"But the fact remains that it does lead to death. Alcoholism is a terminal disease. If affects every organ in the body, and has the psychological and social effects, as well.

"It can be hidden. But if a person continues to drink in excessive amounts, he will die. There's no way around it, unless it's stopped."

Rader said the dangers are critical for teenagers because the effects of alcoholism set in much more rapidly than they do in adults.

"A teenager can become an alcoholic in 10 months, while it might take 10 years for an adult," he said.

This is because adolescence is a particularly stressful period, he said. As a result, increasing amounts of alcohol are need to diminish the effects of that stress.

Most teenagers learn how to cope with those stresses, Rader said, "but for others, alcohol becomes a magic drug that takes all those stresses away. In the long run, though, it doesn't work as well, plus it will kill."

Blasts kill 30 Lebanese

Explosions ripped through a private Moslem training camp on Mount Lebanon Saturday, killing at least 30 militiamen who were practicing how to plant and remove landmines, Lebanese police said.

They said 60 others were wounded in the blasts at Ein Beniyeh Camp, which was being used for mountain warfare training by hundreds of followers of Shiite Moslem leader Imam Mousa Sadr.

The camp is located near the ancient town of Baalbeck where Lebanese army tanks were sent last week to quell armed clashes between Shiites and Christian Phalangists.

Police said only that the explosions were "an isolated accident" and gave no further information.

Earlier, Lebanese Premier Rashid Karami sought to reassure foreign businessmen that his country is secure following months of street fighting between leftists, rightists, Moslems and Christians that left 900 dead.

"We have emerged from these troubles successfully which proves once again the Lebanese miracle," he told Foreign newsmen in Beirut, the commercial center of the Middle East. Karami promised foreign companies in Lebanon his government would do everything in its power to preserve an atmosphere of calm "to give a sense of confidence to foreigners."

Electric chair ready for 'retarded' man, 19

CUMMINS PRISON FARM, Ark. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Henry Lee Giles has an IQ of 59, is "grossly retarded" and is scheduled to die in the electric chair in less than two weeks.

He would be the first person executed in the United States since June 2, 1967, when Luis Joe Monge was put to death at the Colorado State Penitentiary.

Prison officials say they have made no preparations to execute Giles because they expect a stay of execution.

Giles was convicted in May of stabbing to death Evelyn Drummond, 53, during a robbery in Forrest City. In a signed confession submitted into evidence, Giles said he killed Mrs. Drummond because "something came over me to make me do something wrong."

Giles' attorney, Phil Hickey, said the teen-ager has the mentality of a 7½-year-old and didn't know he was signing a confession.

Dr. Arthur Rogers, a clinical psychologist at Veteran's Administration Hospital in North Little Rock, said Gile's IQ was 59 and that he would be classified as "retarded...grossly so."

Prosecuting Atty. Gene Raff said state hospital doctors agreed that Giles was retarded, but that he had "no psychosis, and knew right from wrong."

Kissinger plans aid for Egypt

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is trying to line up America's allies for emergency aid to Egypt in order to smooth the way for an accord with Israel, informed sources said Saturday.

The project is expected to be discussed at a summit meeting of the nine Common Market governments in Brussels on July 16.

One well-informed source said the U.S. approach for help to Egypt was not made through the Common Market organization but to individual member governments and to other governments outside the group, including Japan. The object is to get a group together to cooperate on the aid.

West German Foreign Minister Hans Dieter Genscher is reported to have brought the matter to the attention of the Common Market. In the U.S. view, it is up to the nine countries whether they want to go into the project together or separately.

Egypt's economic situation is chronically bad. President Anwar Sadat has had help from the Arab oil-producing countries as well as from the United States.

Resurfacing on Foothill to start

Motorists traveling on Foothill Boulevard within the Claremont city limits may encounter some inconvenience beginning Monday at 6:30 a.m. when the state Department of Transportation plans to begin resurfacing the four-lane divided highway.

The work from 6:30 to 11 a.m. will begin at the San Bernardino county line and will be done in the following sections: county line to Dartmouth Avenue; Dartmouth Avenue west to Indian Hill Boulevard; Indian Hill Boulevard to Towne Avenue.

At least one lane of traffic will remain open in each direction. There may be short periods during which turning movements across the freshly-pavement area will be restricted.

"No parking" signs will be posted along Foothill Boulevard indicating the area of work scheduled each day.

Property owners and businessmen may be inconvenienced within the construction area, and they are asked to schedule employees, parking, deliveries and other activities to accommodate the project.

Questions may be directed to Dick Gluck, civil engineering associate at 624-4531, extension 229, and George Duffy, public works supervisor, at 624-4531, exte. 242.

Girl, 5, struck by car

A 5-year-old Ontario girl was injured Saturday when she ran into the street in front of the apartments where she lived and was struck by a car.

Joanne Franks, 40, of Ontario told officers she was westbound on West Fifth Street when Jennifer Joell Heimlich of 1352 W. Fifth St. ran across the street to join playmates and collided with the car.

Budget before Pomona council

Pomona City Councilmen Monday will consider final approval of the city's proposed $19.8 million budget for 1975-76, except for those sections dealing with labor costs still under negotiation with employe groups.

The budget calls for no change in the city's current $2.459 municipal tax rate.

The council also will receive an environmental impact report concerning a proposed 42-unit condominium complex on South Towne Avenue. The Planning Commission is recommending that project not be approved.

A $300,000 project, funded mostly with federal funds, for realignment of White Avenue north of San Bernardino Freeway will be considered by the council.

Handicapped ramps for the Pomona City Hall, Council Chambers and Public Library also will be considered for approval at a cost of $26,500.

The council will also consider two staff recommendations concerning Barjud Park and a proposed mini-park near north San Antonio Avenue and Vassar Street at the 8 p.m. meeting.

Mayors line up at federal trough

BOSTON (AP) — Some of the nation's leading big-city mayors urgently appealed Saturday for $2 billion in emergency federal aid to fight the recession in their cities.

Citing New York's financial problems, Mayor Joseph Alioto of San Francisco, president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, told a news conference, "the seeds of New York are in every American city.

"We are here simply to sound the alarm," he said. "The Congress has got to give us help during this recession. We urgently need that."

More than 300 mayors, who gathered for the conference's annual meeting, will take up a resolution this week backing the emergency anti-recession bill that goes before the Senate Government Operations Committee in Washington on Wednesday.

That bill is not viewed favorably by Ford administration officials attending this conference. Furthermore, the nation's governors failed to back the legislation at their annual conference last month.

The money would go only to states and local governments where the unemployment rate was above 6 per cent for three consecutive months. It could be spent as local officials saw fit.

The mayors gathered amid another of a series of budget crises that have plagued cities periodically since the late 1960s, forcing layoffs, reduced services and higher taxes. The mayors' conference estimates that local government has or will enact $1.5 billion in new taxes during the current crunch alone.

Little more than 200 miles away, Abraham Beame, mayor of New York, was trying to determine on Saturday how many of the 19,000 city employes he laid off can be returned to the payroll with a $330-million local tax increase he won at week's end. Meanwhile, New York was paying sanitation men time and a half to help clean up 58,000 tons of garbage left uncollected during a four-day wildcat walkout in protest of the layoffs.

Earlier in the week, Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman overcame a recall effort launched by white firemen angered over his budget and minority hiring plans for the department.

And in Dayton, Ohio, the city was turning street lights back on after half of them had been turned off to save money.

Boston Mayor Kevin White rejected the contention that fiscal mismanagement had caused the problems in New York and other cities.

"What (former New York Mayor John V.) Lindsay did was respond to a need that was there and that the federal government had ignored for the past decade. With the exception of general revenue sharing, Lindsay had no resources to respond to the social demands of the late 1960s. Now, as a consequence, in many cities, the bill has to be paid and we find ourselves in a financial crisis that has been increased by the recession," White said.

Mayor Moon Landrieu and Newark, N.J., Mayor Kenneth Gibson, all Democrats and officials of the conference, catalogued a series of problems: unemployment rates at 40 per cent for black youths in Boston, property taxes at $2,000 a year on a $20,000 house in Newark and what they considered an unfair share of federal resources.

The five-year, $30.2-billion general revenue sharing program has one more year to run. The mayors want another five-year bill passed. The Ford administration supports that and has asked for $30.9 billion for 1977 through 1982.

But Jim Falk, associate director of the White House domestic council, argues that passage of the Democratic-sponsored anti-recession bill could threaten renewal of general revenue sharing.

Falk said that governors and county officials would open a debate designed to reduce the city share of revenue sharing funds if the anti-recession bill is passed, and renewal of general revenue sharing would be pushed into 1976, an election year. "To consider a bill of that size in an election year is dynamite," Falk said in an interview.

"There are only two ways to get a new expenditure," Falk said. "One is new taxes and we're not talking about new taxes. And Congress is not going to talk about new taxes in an election year.

"What I would ask the mayors is, 'Is there any program you're prepared to trade for this bill?'"

Swim sign sparks Claremont dispute

Claremont Director of Parks and Recreation Fred Hawkins has taken issue to a city Architectural Commission motion that the present sign used by the city to advertise the summer swim program at El Roble pool be disapproved for future use, and that a submittal for a sign next summer be presented to the commission in advance of the pool opening.

The commission also voted to encourage the city to explore the possibility of alterations of the existing sign at El Roble Intermediate School next to the pool.

Noting that the sign used this year is the same one used last summer, Hawkins said that "a more elaborate sign would be a waste of money, which the city doesn't have. We don't know whether we will operate a summer swim program next year."

The matter of the sign was discussed last summer by the commission which felt that city identification signs should require the same approval as private signs.

Because the length of time the sign would hang in front of the pool — approximately 75 days — exceeds the normal 30-day period allowed for temporary signs, the staff presented the sign for architectural review.

Chairman Dorothy Goldberg said she felt part of the problem with the sign was too much copy of varying sizes.

City Planning Associate Bill Wojtkowski indicated that the city staff could write a letter to the school district and asked for its cooperation on Ruskin's proposal.

The commission after disapproving the sign said that the parks department should consult the city planning staff as to the design of the city sign.

As to the existing El Roble sign, District Business Manager Charles Abbott explained that it was built by a private firm with money given by El Roble students, and inspected by Walter Montgomery, supervisor of maintenance, operations and transportation for the district.

Abbott said he would contact the county counsel's staff to find out what jurisdiction the Architectural Commission has over the school district as to signs.

Upland council meeting

Two public hearings dealing with streets are scheduled at the Monday meeting of the Upland City Council at 7 p.m. in City Hall.

The first hearing will deal with closing a portion of 14th Street west of Benson Avenue. A second hearing will consider the proposal to change the name of Palomino Avenue, between 13th and 14th streets, to Wedgewood Avenue.

The council also will consider awarding contracts for the improvements at Citrus Park and improvement of Howard access road.

Members will also hear a request for funds from Toward Utility Rate Normalization (TURN) and from the Concerned Citizens Humane Committee.

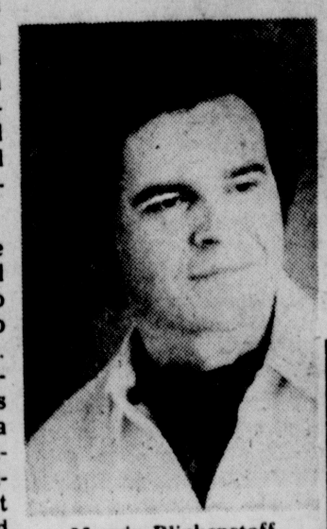

Also on the agenda is the discussion of a proposed additional baseball field to be located in San Antonio Park in an open area zone. The Environmental Assessment Committee feels that the field may have a significant effect on the environment and that an environmental impact report should be prepared and processed.

The Planning Commission will present several recommendations for approval of tract maps for commercial and residential properties.

Also scheduled is an appeal from Lewis Homes of California for a hearing concerning the Planning Commission's denial of a tentative tract map for a subdivision on 10 acres of land on 14th Street between Euclid and San Antonio avenues in an R1-C (single family residential) zone.

Music seminar

Pianist-lecturer Marvin Blickenstaff will present a session for piano teachers at Ralph Pierce Music, Pomona, at 9 a.m. Monday. The workshop is open to all music teachers.

Marvin Blickenstaff

Reservations can be made at 623-5525.

A popular concert pianist, Blickenstaff is chairman of instruction in piano at the University of North Carolina and consultant to Carl Fischer, music publisher. In the latter capacity, he collaborated on the firm's newest piano course, Music Pathways. Since its introduction a year ago, he has made several appearances before groups of music teachers, lecturing on the new teaching philosophies incorporated in the course.

They wouldn't take 'no' for an answer

The Bicentennial Freedom Train will make an 8-day stop in Pomona at Los Angeles County Fairgrounds at Christmas time this year. Ed.

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

ARCHBOLD, Ohio (AP) — The main drag is aptly named Defiance and it's lined with prosperous little shops, including a drugstore that hands out free coffee, bouillon or hot chocolate.

The white bench on the side of the municipal building gives the first hint of what this little village in northwestern Ohio is all about. The lettering proclaims: "God Is Still Number One in Our Town."

The two banks are bulging with money, the police chief has never fired a shot in the line of duty, lawns are neatly mowed, and there's a Bible on the mayor's desk.

It's the village that got the American Freedom Train to come to town, the smallest community the train will visit in its 21-month journey across our land as part of the bicentennial celebration. And despite torrential rains, Archbold's 3,200 citizens pulled off the visit.

The wait to see the train was up to six hours at times. People saw nothing unusual in standing in line that long for a 21-minute conveyor belt ride through the 10 cars and their displays of historical documents and graphic history, from Poor Richard's Almanac to man's walk on the moon. One woman said she felt proud to wait, proud to be an American.

Freedom Train officials laughed when Archbold made its request for the train. It was visiting cities like Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland. Not the Archbolds of the nation.

The name of the game is selling tickets, refreshments and souvenirs. The private, nonprofit foundation behind the train has enormous expenses and must at least break even at every stop. So Archbold — 45 miles west of Toledo and 100 miles from Detroit — didn't look too promising. Furthermore, it's tucked away in the southwestern corner of Fulton County, 420 square miles populated by 33,000.

But this village is like few others. Civic pride here is more catching than the measles. And everybody's got it, from the saloon keeper to the banker.

Descended mainly from German stock, Archboldians don't take no for an answer. Especially when it's got something to do with the American dream they not only believe in, but live with. The Freedom Train was one of their dreams.

Richard Harris, the school superintendent, wrote the first letter and got a form letter back.

"I can imagine their reaction. They wondered what this little jerkwater burg wanted with the train," said Harris. The second letter was a little stronger, pointing out that the spirit of America is not in the big cities, but in rural America, in communities like Archbold.

Then Mayor Bill Lovejoy fired off a letter. And then came Max Smith, 32-year-old president of the radio and cable TV station in town and Archbold's answer to Sol Hurok. He went to Washington to lobby the Freedom Train officials.

Finally, the Freedom Train officials quit laughing. Between stops in Cincinnati and Fort Wayne, the 25-car train would be spotted in Archbold — starting Friday, June 13th, the 13th stop in the train's journey.

ARCHBOLD . . .

churches, a high school, three grade schools, four bars, two banks, one savings and loan association, a five-man police department, a 26-man volunteer fire department, 20 industries and not a smokestack in sight.

The community is heavily Mennonite with two Mennonite churches in town and 13 in a radius of 50 miles. It's also heavily Republican. Some say as high as 85 per cent.

Two-thirds of the economy comes from industry; the other third from agriculture. La Choy Food Products is the largest single employer, with 600 on its payroll. The sign by the side of the highway says "Welcome to Archbold," and beneath that, "Chinatown, U.S.A." And there's not a Chinaman in town. But 50 tons of bean sprouts come out of Archbold every day.

A handful of city officials and members of Archbold's bicentennial committee rode to Toledo in a converted school bus to meet the train. The bus owner, Joe Hall of nearby Wauseon, had stayed up all night to paint it red, white and blue and letter it "The Spirit of '76."

As the 425-ton steam locomotive chugged into sight at Toledo, the engineer hooted hello. The mayor and Smith hugged each other, tears came to Smith's eyes and everyone cheered.

The committee proudly boarded the train they had fought so hard to get. Champagne flowed as the train belched through the dark night, the whistle hootey-hooting every few minutes. Crowds appeared at every crossing, a motorcycle raced alongside and the committee waved from the rear platform. One man pretended he was running for president, a la FDR.

And then it chugged into Archbold, just after midnight. Over 1,000 people greeted the train.

The happy band moved to Ickey's, a gathering spot featuring pool tables, an upstairs where the men play cards, mostly euchre and something called "horsethief." There's homemade food and a shot of bar whiskey for 45 cents.

Ickey's is owned by Ickey. He's Robert Dominique (pronounced Dominick), a gregarious father of eight who says half the town doesn't know his first name. His wife, Aud, does the cooking, and sings and plays the piano on Friday nights when a five-piece band belts out some mean Chicago jazz, interspersed with Ohio State and University of Michigan fight songs.

The Friday night the train was in town, Ickey's had its best night in history.

For the Freedom Train, Max Smith and the hundreds on various committees booked 36 hours of entertainment on two stages set up in a field next to the train.

They had everything from a dance floor for a Saturday night polka to rock groups, barbershop quartets and old-fashioned sing-a-longs led by the ladies of a church group.

Fireworks and a staged presentation of the signing of the Declaration of Independence were scheduled each night. As each signer's name was called on Friday, a rocket was fired from the cornfield behind the train. A large Liberty Bell and a Statue of Liberty were lit and the sky sparkled with red, white and blue falling stars. (The bicentennial committee agreed to pay the farmer for any corn ruined.)

Alas, the driving rains canceled the fireworks on all but Friday night and only 12 of the 36 hours of entertainment were not rained out. The fields with the tents and Archbold's very own displays had been turned into a quagmire.

One large display tent contained women quilting, an old fire engine, and historic pieces from the collection of Erie Sauder, founder and president of Sauder Woodworking Co. The tent was ripped apart by the storm and was closed on Sunday.

Obviously a wealthy man, Sauder made his money the Archbold way. He started his woodworking business in a barn in 1934, moving the little equipment he owned into the furnace room of his home during the cold Archbold winters.

Today the company employes 500 people and operates a subsidiary that is the second largest producer of church furniture in the nation.

What makes an Archbold? Erie Sauder's got an answer.

"People dream here. That's the first thing. But to make that dream a reality you need a financial community. We've always had banks here that helped people realize those dreams.

"Alvin Stamm — he's dead now, I guess I can mention his name — he had foresight. Alvin would lend money to a boy with no education who wanted to be a cattle feeder. According to banking laws you couldn't loan them a dollar. But Alvin knew who the dad was and what he did. And before you knew it, those feeder fellows were making money."

Kenny Stamm, son of Alvin, is now the executive vice president of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank. Neither bank went under during the Depression.

The current recession is scarcely noted by Archbold, where 85 per cent of the people own their own homes and the mean income is somewhere around $10,000.

The Sauder family is typical in that his sons are in the family business. In shop after shop, one finds a family operation. The young men and women come back somehow even after college.

One retired school teacher said he had taught four generations of many of the families here. Why do they return? Residents think it's close family ties, stable industry, and because Archbold is the best.

Bicentennial film crew carrying on

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The cast and crew of a Bicentennial movie being filmed here have agreed to work without wages in order to complete the film.

Last Wednesday 20th Century Fox ordered an end to the filming because money had run out.

The studio said the film's 12-day budget of $397,652 had been exceeded in the seventh day of production. It estimated the film would cost more than $600,000 if it were completed.

That angered director John Huston who pledged $5,000 of his own money and persuaded most of his crew and cast to forego their meager salaries to continue work into the eighth day.

Producer Lloyd Ritter said Fox fired him when he refused to stop shooting after seven days, agreeing instead to go along with Huston and film an eighth day.

And Ritter charged Fox tried to cut costs by cheapening production, a move Ritter said Huston would not tolerate. The director implemented several creative compromises in an effort to keep costs down, but, according to Ritter, insisted that an eighth day of shooting was necessary to make the film a success.

But when Fox remained adamant about ceasing filming at midnight Wednesday, Huston became outraged and an historic meeting of rebellion was held in the virtual birthplace of rebellious meetings.

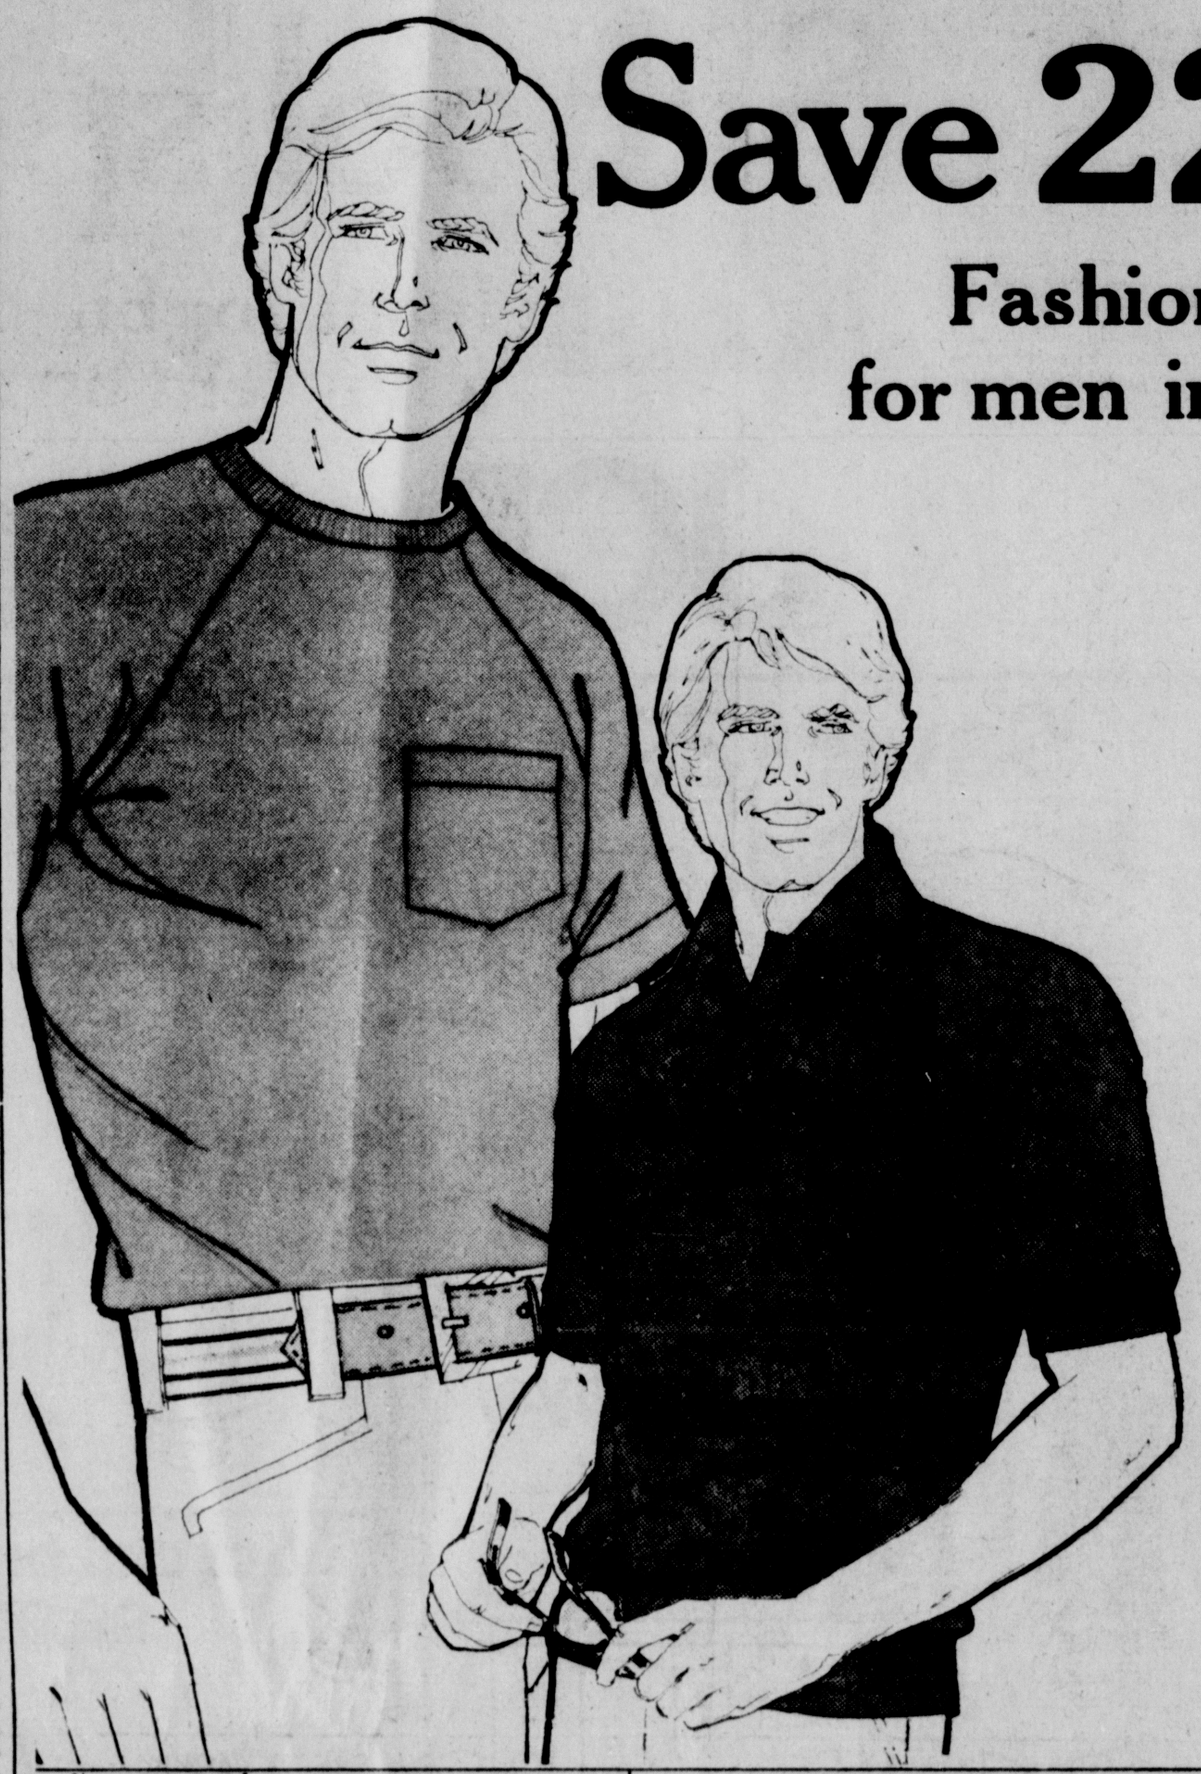

"It was one of the most stiring moments I've witnessed," said Ritter.

The actors volunteered to turn back their minimum union salaries, local unions allowed the crew to work for nothing and local filming was completed.

"All that remains to be done is some filler shooting by a second-unit crew. A musical score must be added and some mixing and dubbing done before the film makes its Oct. 4 debut.

'Well Digger Willie' loves his hard work

NIAMEY, Niger (AP) — "The real world," said Willie the Well Digger, "is out there in the village where you're needed. You got a reason to get up in the morning."

A Peace Corps volunteer, he has hunted water for the still suffering survivors of West Africa's seven-year drought.

Willie Russell, a 26-year-old black from Newan, Ga., has come to love Africa like no place on earth.

"It's the people and the world they make for themselves," he said, sitting on a hotel terrace in Niger's pleasant, riverfront capital, but letting his thoughts drift to a mud and straw village 70 miles north in the parched savannas. "The way they laugh at trouble and help each other out. Even in the worst days, I'd fall asleep at night listening to the big calibash drums beating for a holiday or a baptism."

His mind's eye twinkled at a procession of simple village pleasures. "The expression on the people's faces when you hit water, 150 feet down, and they pass around that first sip. The food, man — it takes some getting used to, but there ain't nothing like it in the States. And Sunday nights after the big market when the people all gets together to sing and dance and visit all around, and maybe there's a wrestling match between two villages . . .

"Not too many big things, but I love it. These people taught me a whole hell of a lot about living."

Willie had come to town, six miles over dirt roads, to pick up a load of cement for casing a new well and to rap with a reporter about what an American black finds in Africa.

"I was scared when I got here," Willie confessed. "Of the people, not the animals. Hell, I only seen two snakes since I been here. They went one way and I went the other. But quick. And the only crocodile I ever saw is in the museum here. I was afraid I couldn't relate to the people. I was two years in India and hated everything about it. Africa's different. There's times I think I could spend the whole rest of my life here, but I know no matter how long I stay, I'll always be an American. Ain't no changing that."

WEST AFRICAN TRIBESMAN

Willie's house in Oulam, the village where he is now showing the people how to find water, doesn't have electricity, so he goes to bed early, around nine, and reads magazines from home by lantern light. Most days, he's up at six, "with the giraffes and hippos," trying to get as much of the hole dug as the climbing sun and rising humidity will allow. The projects he directs are all self-help, so everyone from the chief on down lends a hand.

What Willie loves most about Africa is the respect and affection shown for old people. "My grandparents taught me to respect my elders. Grandpa was a sharecropper back in Georgia, and that's how he brought me up. Love, he always said, was a lifetime deal not the garbage you see in the movies."

What Willie misses most are Sunday mornings back home, church services and hymn singing in the clapboard Methodist church.

He misses baseball, too, and thinks often of afternoons spent playing second base for Columbus Tech in Atlanta. He might have tried the pros, but for a knee injury.

Early in his love affair with Africa, Willie dreamed of buying his own camel "and cutting around like a real desert dude." Now he is possessed by an even more compelling dream that inhibits most of his life's savings and all of his letters home.

He wants to bring his mother, Edna Russell, to Africa for a visit. Maybe even to stay.

"I think a lot about it, and all the good things she's done for me in her life," he said. "Mom does domestic work in Lookout Mountain, Tenn., working in other people's homes. She'd love it here. It would be a big cultural shock at first, like it was for me, but when she saw the work I'm doing, and the love I have for the people, I just know they're going to love her too."

Mom just sends him a can of his favorite pipe tobacco and tells him to come home to the States where he belongs.

"Maybe I will," Willie mused over his tobacco pouch. "But she ought to come see it before it's too late."

Willie knows that the Africa he loves already has begun to vanish. The oil boom in neighboring Nigeria is bringing electrical power to the bush villages and replacing the camels and donkeys with trucks and motorbikes. The twilight glow of the cooking fires, scenting the woodlands with West Africa's spicy herbal perfumes, is fading fast in the advance of the kerosene stove.

"How can I weep for an underdeveloped country that's starting to develop?" Willie ponders the dilemma of an American black hopelessly in love with Africa. "That's why I came here, isn't it?"

State team aids schools

A state school management team has helped California school districts save $7.2 million in the last 3½ years, claims Wilson Riles, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The local school systems also are saving an additional $2.8 million each year because of permanent economies suggested by the team, he said.

"In these financially strained times, these savings take on a double importance," Riles said.

"First, they relieve some of the need for additional local school levies. And, second, they redirect existing dollars from non-essential uses back into the instructional program."

Since 1971, the management assistance team of the California State Department of Education has helped 65 school districts reduce extra staff, seek grants and hidden sources of funds, sell off excess property, re-use facilities and improve operating procedures.

During that time, the districts learned how to cut $4.6 million in annual and one-time expenses and gain another $3 million in annual and one-time income. The implementation of these measures cost the districts $429,000.

— A school district saved $180,000 in operating costs by transferring an isolated elementary school into an adjacent school district.

— A large metropolitan school district was advised to change its system of accounting for delinquent taxes, saving $2 million.

— A central valley district gained $375,000 by selling a school site that was excess because of enrollment declines.

— A small south coast district saved $75,250 when members of the team helped construct a new budget that introduced a number of personnel savings.

The 65 districts have saved $1.9 million in accounting procedures, $1.3 million in budget development, $1 million in executive planning and direction, $999,000 in expenditure control and $848,000 in instructional staffing.

In addition, Riles said more than 1,000 nonmonetary management improvements have been made as a result of the team's studies. In many cases, these improvements have been worth as much as those that have been reported in dollars.

"Throughout the field of public education, we are seeking and must find ways to make the most of each dollar we receive," Riles said.

"There is no question that our schools are significantly underfinanced. We simply must raise educational revenues at both the state and local level.

"As we work for this, our immediate goal is to be able to say to the taxpayer, 'Each of your dollars is being used in the most efficient and effective way possible for the education of our young.' Through the work of the management assistance team and equal efforts by county and local school administrators, I believe we are making strong progress toward that goal."

Riles said the laws governing school financing and operations in California are so numerous and complex that many local districts have too little time to study all of them for possible savings.

"In these team studies, we are combining the statewide knowledge of the team and the local expertise of county superintendents and the school district administrators," he said.

The team is now completing about 20 local studies a year, with a recurring backlog of another 20 requests from other school districts.

Thoughts

Sing, O heavens, for the Lord has done it; shout, O depths of the earth; break forth into singing, O mountains, O forest, and every tree in it! For the Lord has redeemed Jacob, and will be glorified in Israel. — Isaiah 44:23.

"Music is the only language in which you cannot say a mean or sarcastic thing."—John Erskine, American author.

Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for the conviction of things not seen. For by it the men of old received divine approval. — Hebrews 11:1,2.

This charge I commit to you, Timothy, my son, in accordance with the prophetic utterances which pointed to you, that inspired by them you may wage the good warfare, holding faith and a good conscience. By rejecting conscience, certain persons have made shipwreck of their faith. — I Timothy 1:18,19.

Chalets for privileged bigwigs

WASHINGTON — For the comfort and convenience of vacationing bigwigs, the National Park Service maintains rustic chalets at two of the nation's most scenic sites.

Both lodges are closed to the ordinary taxpayers who are obliged to seek public accommodations or pitch their tents.

Only the privileged few are admitted to Brinkerhoff House overlooking Jackson Lake, Wyo., at the foot of the majestic Grand Teton mountains, or to Camp Hoover deep in the forests of Shenandoah National Park.

The National Park Service zealously protects the privacy of the distinguished guests who stay at these idyllic hideaways. But we have obtained copies of the star-studded guest registers from both lodges.

A number of notables, ranging from CBS's Walter Cronkite to Utah's Gov. Cal Rampton, have holed up at fabulous Brinkerhoff House, with its great stone fireplace, stately beamed ceilings and picture windows opening on breathtaking views.

One enthralled guest, Rep. Teno Roncalio, D.-Wyo., was moved to write prophetically in the guest registry: "Worth Jack Anderson's Abuse!" Another, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D.-Ind., found both the scenery and the nominal charges "awe-inspiring and relaxing."

Prominent Washington attorney George V. Allen Jr., referring to the trout that inhabit the cold, clear mountain streams, wrote happily that "Fish creek yielded an 18-inch cutthroat today."

Cronkite, who brought three of his family with him, apparently had the lodge opened especially for him in mid-winter. They spent a five-day Alpine vacation beneath the craggy, snow-capped peaks during the New Year, 1974, holiday. Cronkite left no comments in the registry, but he told us his access to the lodge had been wholly "innocent."

Among the others who signed in at Brinkerhoff House were Reps. B. F. Sisk, D.-Calif., John Jarman, R.-Okla., and Federal Communications Commission Rex Lee.

Camp Hoover in the picturesque Shenandoah woodlands was a favorite retreat for White House aides, who sought to get away from the tribulations of the Watergate scandal in 1973 and 1974.

Among those whose names appear on the register are Curtis Herge, who collected illegal contributions for President Nixon; Clay Whitehead, who cracked down on the TV networks for Nixon; H. R. Haldeman's cup bearer, Larry Higby; and Nixon hatchetman Fred Malek.

Two of the good guys of the Watergate days, former Attorney General Elliott Richardson and his sidekick, William Ruckelshaus, also visited the lodge.

Grumped one official about the pampered few who stay at the exclusive hideaways: "They make enough money to scratch for lodgings like the rest of us."

Footnote: The rules supposedly limit the use of the lodges to "Members of Congress and presidential appointees." But in practice, the cronies of the mighty also have wangled VIP keys.

DRUG CRISIS: An alarming 25 per cent of America's 190,000 GIs in Europe are so strung out on hootch, hashish and heroin that they can't perform their daily duties properly.

This is the grim conclusion of a House International Relations subcommittee study, now in the works, which claims 50,000 of our European-based servicemen are "in some way incapacitated by the abuse of drugs or alcohol."

Chairman Lester Wolff, D.-N.Y., found drug abuse in the Air Force comparatively low. But addiction in the Army, he charged, was epidemic. By his figures, at least 12 per cent of the Army troops used hashish or marijuana, another 12 per cent drank too much alcohol and two per cent were on hard drugs, mainly heroin.

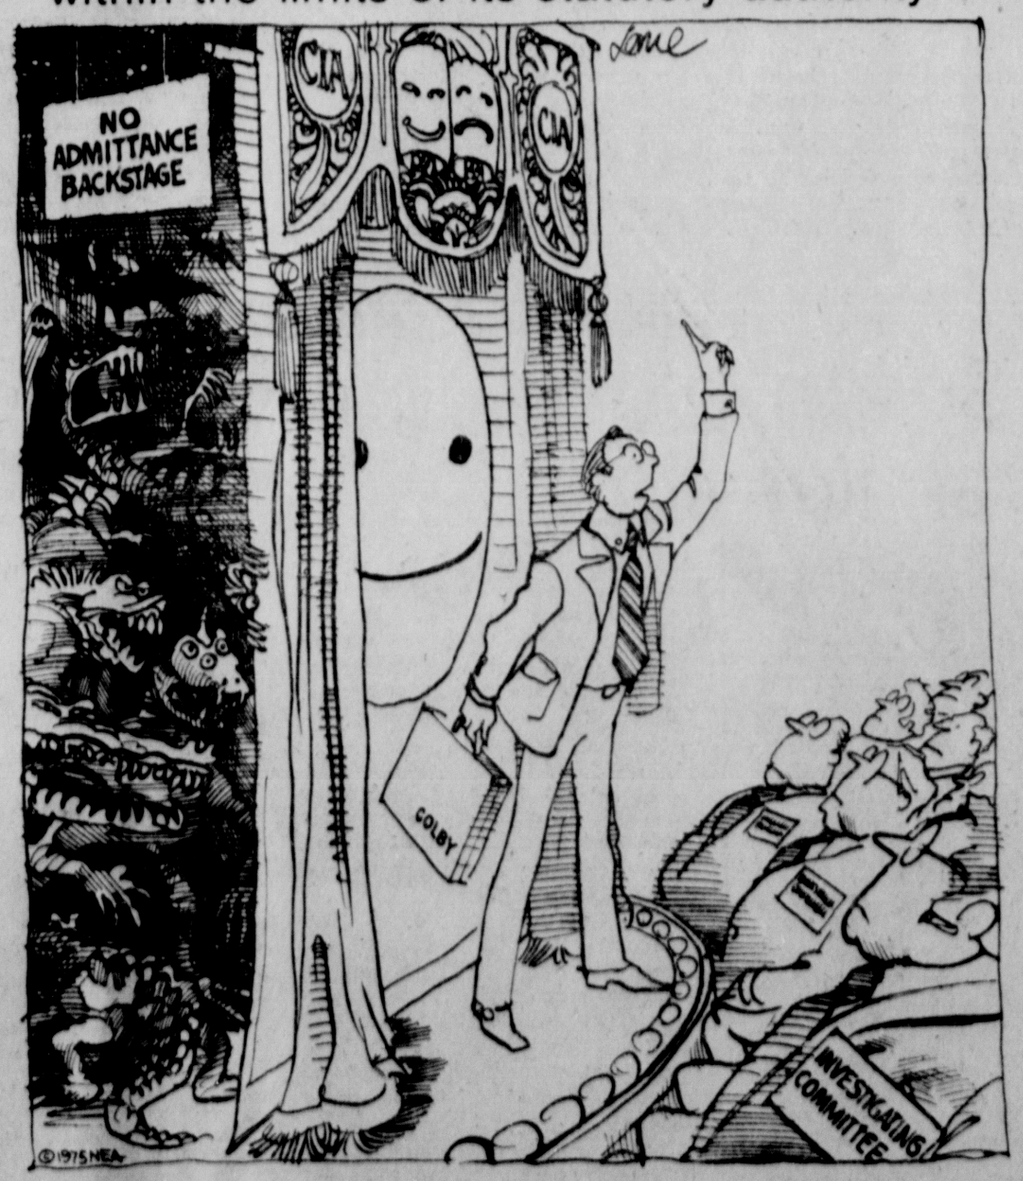

Wolff's study blamed the problem on general boredom and easy access to cheap drugs and booze. He also criticized the military brass for failing to help the GIs understand why they have to serve so far from home.

The most menacing new drug form, according to the unpublished study, is a potent marijuana derivative called "hashish oil." A droplet on a toothpick or cigarette or in a drink, once it touches the tongue, has an immediate effect.

Wolff found that most hard drugs are smuggled by boat and plane from Asia into European cities, particularly Amsterdam. The same elements are present in Europe, primarily Germany, for hard drug addiction as had existed in Vietnam during the GI drug craze, he reports.

Footnote: The Army hotly disputed Wolff's figures, saying Army rehabilitation statistics "do not support the claim." A spokesman said that at the end of March, there were only 7,540 in alcohol and drug programs, with many of these on the way to a cure.

"The CIAs activities today are carried out within the limits of its statutory authority."

Just in jest

These are the happy days of vacation. But every silver lining has its cloud. Which is why this summer's liberated scholars are hopping mad and loudly shouting DISCRIMINATION. Their problem is they haven't been around long enough to get their voting ability organized into an effective political pressure group. So they are now frantically scrounging around looking for jobs while noting with green eyed envy that Congress has taken good care of their teachers by enacting legislation which makes those teachers eligible for summer unemployment pay.

Men aren't the only dirty dogs when it comes to interfering with equal rights for women. Also high on that list are the wives of Los Angeles firemen. Women's equality may be all right in its place, say those firemen's wives, but that place definitely isn't a 'round the clock, side by side working association with firemen husbands. — Well, as the old saying goes, you set one to catch one. And after all the equal rights tumult and shouting dies, you can bet your last bottom dollar that it will have been the wives of America who kept the militant women's righters of America in their proper place.

What people say

"Right now we are a nation tossed around like a cork at sea . . . we must assert control over our destiny. To do this we don't need a man on horseback. But we do need an act of national will, rising up from the people, strong enough to be felt in the Congress and the executive branch."

— Former Secretary of the Treasury John Connally on his re-entering politics following acquittal of bribery charges.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions. It costs you nothing. Write to Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415.

Heartline: Will the Railroad Retirement pension be increased in July, the same as Social Security? If the new bill is passed allowing each Social Security recipient a check of $50, will the Railroad Retirement allow the same? H. K.

Answer: Yes you will get the same dollar increase and also the $50 bonus.

Heartline: I would like to apply for supplemental security income but I owe an automobile. Would that stop me from receiving payments? W. S.

Answer: Not necessarily. If it is the only vehicle you use for transportation, and if its value is not more than $1,200, or if you need it because you are disabled or for employment or medical reasons, you will be eligible.

Heartline: I am receiving supplemental security income. I work a little part time and earn $100 a month. I only get $89 a month because taxes and insurance are taken out. Which amount should I report to the Social Security office as my earnings? O. M.

Answer: You should report the full $100 a month as earnings.

Heartline: I receive supplemental security income and a veteran's pension. I just received an increase in my veteran's payment. Do I have to advise Social Security of the increase? B. B.

Answer: Yes, you should report an increase or decrease of income to your Social Security office.

Heartline: Is it true that the Government Health Plan that everyone is talking about has been passed into law? T. F. D.

Answer: If you are referring to the proposed Social Health Program which should cover all Americans hospital and medical bills, similar to Britains health plan, the answer is no.

Dr. Miller

Is it safe now to bathe dog?

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've been waiting all year to bathe our dirty dog, and he is dirty. Is it safe now? — F. V.

DEAR F. V.: Perhaps that depends on your technique. Most dogs can be bathed at any time of year without particular risk, provided precautions are taken concerning chilling during the drying process. If, however, you have a colt-sized canine which you bathe outside with a garden hose, then you're right to have waited. That type of a bath DOES require a warm day, since chilling would then definitely be a factor.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I know it's not good for a cat to run around having kittens all over the place. I know I should have her spayed. It's just that I don't want to put her through all that. Truthfully, now, doesn't that operation cause the cat a lot of pain? — W. D.

DEAR W. D.: The operation itself causes the cat no pain. She is under a general anesthetic during surgery. Postoperatively, for at least the first few days, there may be some comparatively mild discomfort ranging from gas pains to pulling stitches. Most female felines breeze through this period with no problem at all. As far as actual pain is concerned, delivering a litter of kittens, or those moments of mating, can be considerably more painful for the cat than this related surgery.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Rhode Island Red, my pet hen, hasn't turned out to be as productive as I'd hoped. She has some shortcomings as a pet, but I figured her keeping me supplied with breakfast would more than make up for it. But I've kept records, and she's doing badly, even though she's a pampered bird. Oh, she lays beautiful brown eggs all right. But she averages one a week. I love her anyway, but isn't she terribly lazy? — M. S.

DEAR M. S.: Rhode Islands Reds can generally be expected to do better than that. Many, in fact, take only one day a week off, if that. Your Red must be overaged, overfed, poorly fed or lacking incentive. As long as she's in as a pet, perhaps she feels she really doesn't have to lay on the job. Besides, compared to some birds, she's not doing too badly. Take the poor (vanishing) California condor, for example. She only gets around to laying an egg (one) every two years.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How are indoor-outdoor rugs for puppies? — K. Y.

DEAR K. Y.: Fine, as far as the puppies are concerned. They love rugs of any kind. For indoor-outdoor carpeting as a long-term investment, such rugs last longer than most when they're hosting a piddling, pooping puppy. They last longest, however, if the rug is outdoors and the puppy indoors, or vice-versa. . .

Ann Landers

Setting examples for young

Dear Ann Landers: I write this out of genuine concern for today's youth.

Parents, have you found your son or daughter, grade school and up —

Lying — but overlooked it?

Cheating — felt a little disappointed?

Swearing — got a little upset?

Stealing — gave a lecture?

Drinking — grounded him for a week?

O.K., Mom and Dad, just who set the examples for these children? Was it those bad kids at school or you in your own home?

What you DO speaks louder than what you SAY! If the youth of today are going to get straightened out, the adult generation had better start setting standards kids can look up to.

What images do your children have of you? Puffing on a cigaret, sitting around before dinner with martinis, cheating on your income tax, telling a few small lies, swearing at them and each other? Not a very pretty picture, is it?

What is life like at YOUR house? — Boca Raton

Dear Boca: I've said it before, but I'll say it again — children need models more than they need critics. When parents don't set good examples it ill becomes to ask, "Where did we fail?"

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a daughter-in-law wrote and complained that her Sunday dinner plans were upset frequently because her mother-in-law insisted on waiting until Sunday morning to invite her family over for dinner.

Your answer was good, but I believe there's another angle. I speak for mothers as well as mothers-in-law. We would love to be invited to your place for Sunday dinner once in a while. We've been cooking for you and your family for many years. How about a break, girls? Maybe that late invitation is because your mother-inlaw thinks, "Maybe THIS will be the week she'll invite me!" — Sore Bunions

Dear Bun: It's amazing how many readers came up with that same reasoning! You may have something there, doll.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for printing the letter from the person who received a corneal transplant through an eye bank. I'm the executive secretary of the Lions Eye Bank at the University of Washington in Seattle. Your letter stirred a great deal of interest in the donation of eyes and we are very grateful.

Did you know that in 1925 Helen Keller challenged the Lions Service Clubs all over the world to become her "Knights of Blindness"? Since that time, the Lions have worked on projects such as buying glasses for children, supporting medical research for eye disease and paying for eye operations for the indigent.

There are about 55 eye banks in the U.S. and the Lions support nearly 75 per cent of them. Since the Seattle Eye Bank started in July '69, we have supplied 587 eyes for corneal transplants.

Thank you for making people aware of this important project. — Donna Oiland

Dear Donna: Bless you for giving me the opportunity to give the Lions their just due. They are beautiful people.

Game show pros sure to occur

It was bound to happen. A couple from Arkansas has turned game show pro.

In 18 months, John and Stephanie Bates have earned $41,000 in cash and merchandise (in their words) "by being able to come up with quick answers and to be jubilant and excited all the time."

The world is full of potential contestants who can come up with quick answers, but how many of us are equipped to jump 15 feet off the floor when we win a paddle boat and a weekend on Larva Lake?

You mark my word. It is only a matter of time before a chain of Jubilance and Excitement Training Schools open up all over the country. The brochure will go something like this:

JOE CARTER'S JUBILANCE AND EXCITEMENT SEMINAR

WHO IS ELIGIBLE? Persons over 18 years of age who can pass the grueling physical requirements: (a) jumping higher than Bob Barker's head; (b) ignoring the symptoms of a coronary when you have just won a trip to Athens, Ga., and not Greece; (c) sitting four hours under a barrage of hot lights, dressed as a battery, until called upon by Monty Hall, and still becoming hysterical.

CURRICULUM

WHIMPERING AND QUIVERING (3 credit hours): A "must" for contestants to employ between the time they've answered the questions and the time they've found out what they've won. It includes biting your lip until it bleeds, wringing hands, listening to the audience shout obscenities and rolling eyes back in head until whites are showing.

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU'VE WON THE CAR (5 credit hours): An in-depth study in hysteria taught by the winner of a 1953 Chevy who won it by knowing the Bangladesh high school fight song.

HUGGING AND KISSING TV GAME SHOW HOSTS NEED NOT BE FATAL (3 credit hours): Pressure points around the throat, cutting off breathing with your body, and lifting host off the floor are outlined.

WHAT TO DO WHEN THE CHEST PAINS COME: Know which shows have oxygen and which ones expect you to be a sport about a coronary. Remember, there is no jubliance and excitement in passing out. Learn how to stay on your feet.

LOOK LIKE A LOSER TO THE IRS: Handy tips on how to stagger by the IRS men carrying a bag of gold and still hang onto your citizenship.

Dr. Lamb

Swimming is fine exercise

DEAR DR. LAMB — read your column about the man who injured his back while changing a tire. He said exercises irritated his back. Would he be able to swim? I had back trouble, and swimming cured my ailment. Isn't it a safe way to exercise?

DEAR READER — The answer depends on what is causing the back pain. Exercise of any form is sometimes not advisable in the presence of recent injuries. However, you are generally right. Swimming is excellent exercise.

I often recommend it for people who have problems with knees, ankles, hips or the back. It is one way many people can exercise without bearing the full weight of the body. It is also a good exercise to stretch the muscles and tendons to regain their full range of motion. Many joint and back pains are related or at least involve muscle spasm. Swimming helps stretch the muscles and relaxes the spasm.

Many of the swimming movements strengthen the abdomen which helps the back. Some people will need more specific exercises that involve more work for the abdominal muscles to provide good support to the back. Strong abdominal muscles help protect the back and prevent backache and minor back injuries.

For more information on exercises to strengthen the abdominal muscles, write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019, and ask for The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control: Avoiding the Big Middle. Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for mailing and costs.

DEAR DR. LAMB — A few weeks ago you had a column dealing with hemorrhoids. I am under the impression that you stated that the outer hemorrhoids could be taken care of in the doctor's office. I would like to know if this is done with a local or if the patient has to be put to sleep.

Two years ago I had a heart attack and was in the hospital for four months. My doctor does not want to do any surgery that requires putting me to sleep. He says that would be too dangerous, but something has to be done as the itching is terrific and is about to drive me crazy. He said he has never heard of it being done in a doctor's office. I would appreciate anything you can tell me about this problem.

DEAR READER — You have confused the treatment for an acute thrombosed hemorrhoid and the chronic problem. Doctors do not do a hemorrhoid repair in the office. They often do open and drain an acute thrombosed hemorrhoid of the external area in the office.

In this case a clot is formed in the vein of the hemorrhoid, and it can be painful. To relieve the immediate discomfort the top of the thrombosed hemorrhoid is cut off and the clot expelled. With the pressure removed, the person usually obtains considerable relief.

To do a proper hemorrhoid repair and remove the dilated veins is a fairly extensive procedure, at least more than most doctors would think of doing in the office.

Many patients who have had heart attacks subsequently have major surgery without problems. It depends on how well you are doing. Only your doctor knows that.

South picks right contract

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When you play that a reverse bid by opener is a one-round force, you can get to be "Reverse happy."

Thus, South hoped to get to notrump and decided to bid his three-card heart suit with that aim in mind. We assume that if North had raised hearts, South would have played a heart contract with three in his hand and four in dummy. When North rebid three clubs, South abandoned the idea of notrump and jumped to five clubs.

Five clubs is the right final contract. West really should have opened a diamond instead of a heart into South's bid suit, but West didn't like to lead from kings and he held equals in hearts.

The heart lead gave South a good start toward making his contract, since the king of hearts was no longer a problem.

At trick two South led his ace of clubs and got the bad news. "There was a sure trump loser," Could he do anything to avoid losing two diamond tricks?

South saw that he could with a lot of luck. He cashed dummy's ace and king of spades and ruffed a spade. The spades broke. Then he cashed his second high heart, ruffed a heart and led a fourth spade. East did the best he could by ruffing, but South just discarded a losing diamond and was home with the bacon.

For Monday, July 7, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Good news is coming your way today from several directions. Get in touch with key people who figure in your immediate plans.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your material prospects are extremely promising today. Be extra-alert for opportunity. A good day to ask for that long-overdue raise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You'll be fortunate in dealings today with groups or large organizations, especially if you take your case right to the top.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Things will fall in place for you today without need for you to expend too much effort on your own behalf.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An event occurring today at some distance will prove to be for your benefit. You may learn of it through the mails.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Important strides can be made today regarding a major goal. Don't waste your time on mundane things that you can take care of later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) A plan you'll conceive today will be far-seeing and profitable. Take follow-up steps to make it a reality.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You can do much better for yourself today in business negotiations if the controls are in your hands, not in someone else's.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be lucky today in situations where you'll be dealing with a long-time close associate. Each will protect the other's flanks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions having a direct influence upon your work or career are extremely favorable today. Do the best job you're capable of.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Whereas yesterday your contacts couldn't be relied upon, the opposite is true today. People will go out of their way to help you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A beneficial break is coming in a situation that will mean something materially to both you and your family. Be patient and hopeful.

Your Birthday July 7, 1975

Luck will take a more active role in your affairs this year. Opportunities to raise your standing in the eyes of others are likely, careerwise and socially.

L.M. Boyd

If you waddle, you'll fall less

A consultant with the National Safety Council contends his studies indicate that elderly people who learn to waddle like geese when they walk don't fall down as much as do those seasoned souls who walk normally. The incidence of bone fractures is much less among the waddler, says he.

THAT BASEBALL great Bob Feller recently was quoted as saying Nolan Ryan was a thrower, not a pitcher, yet. Maybe so. But some fancy machinery has registered Ryan's fastball at 100.9 m.p.h. which is 3 m.p.h. speedier than the clockwork showed on Feller's hot pitch.

LOVE AND WAR

Young lady, where do you expect to find your future matrimonial mate? Our Love and War man reports the romance statisticians have done a little calculating about that. They say the odds run 70 to one that you won't marry any of the boys in the office where you work. About 100 to one you won't marry your boss. And 1,700 to one you won't marry your doctor.

Q. "THESE electric coffeepot makers must be getting stingy. The cord on the one I just bought is less than three feet long. How come?"

A. A lot of ladies scalded themselves when they got tangled up in longer cords that dangled from countertops. So the Underwriters Laboratories called for such shorter cords.

TEACHERS

Please file the fact that 70,000 teachers a year in this country are slapped, scratched or belted by irate students. And the murder count in the public schools has gone over 100 per year, Your Honor.

IT'S ALSO a matter of record that the cannivals of the Marquesas Islands long regarded the female forearm as the choicest morsel of human flesh.

IF THE STUDY of ancient inscriptions on cave walls, church doors, tombstones, wherever, is your specialty, what fascinates you is epigraphy.

THAT RENOWNED package designer named Leslie Ingram says, "The squirrels in New York City's parks are filthy emaciated beasts. Sneaky-side glancers. Won't look you in the eye. They're peanut eaters. How I miss the big, fat, bushy-tailed squirrels that stare you down for pecans."

Again our Love and War man is asked why romantic fellow's are far more likely to address their ladyfriends as "honey" and "darling" than by name. Nothing complicated about that. Endearments are safer. Man's memory is imperfect, you know. There are moments of high emotion when it just wouldn't do to address one girl by another girl's name.

ANOTHER WORD for chamber is camera. Originally, military men who slept in the same camera were called camerades. Now just conrades. So reports our Language man.

A LONGTIME EXHIBITOR at auto shows says he can spot a man's nationality immediately at such. As follows: If said customer first feels the upholstery, he's English. If he first looks at the engine, he's German. If he first tests the horn, he's Italian. And if he starts right off dickering about the price, he's American.

Gene back in 'America'

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Kuralt and his "On the Road" pieces for CBS are okay, I guess. But for my dough, the guy who best catches the flavor and humor of genuine Americana is Gene Shepherd.

He did it brilliantly for public TV in a 1971 series called "Gene Shepherd's America." Now, perhaps as a bicentennial goodie, the Public Broadcasting Service will rerun the 13-part series this summer.

The first show airs Tuesday, with Shephard holding forth on the virtues of fishing, while casting about in a Maine river and recalling the joys of crappie fishing in a fetid Indiana pond when he was young.

Other editions feature studies and memories of working in a steel mill, flying and his Old Man's first flight, train travel and his Army train ride with K Company in World War II, and what it feels like to get in a car and just keep going and get away from it all.

It's hard to describe his approach, other than to say he brings into uncommon relief the odd, sad and funny common experiences of life in the United States, doing it like a gabby, funny tourist from Middle America.

He'll arrive to inspect our 49th state and report: "Alaska, it just isn't like Cleveland." Or, while celebrating food as an art form, he'll warn "there's a lot more to life than a Hostess Twinkie."

The Chicago - born Shepherd, a pilot, author of humorous essays on 'Back When' and a long-distance monologist on radio station WOR here since 1958, did "America" for Boston's WGBH-TV.

The series was taped with the portable "minicam" many stations now are just starting to use. He had a small crew — producer-director Fred Barzyk and coproducers Leigh Brown and Olivia Tappan.

The idea of the show, he says, was to take the audiences to corners of America they rarely see on TV, and also get into what the philosophically inclined call the American experience.

"For example — beer," he said. "I said beer is truly the life blood of most Americans. So I did a show saluting beer. Not how they make it, just 'hooray for beer!'"

Fans of the 46-year-old Shepherd — and there are many, thanks to both his TV show and his stories in Playboy magazine — will be happy to know he has other public TV projects afoot these days.

One is "The Great Inverted Bowl of Darkness," a 90-minute drama he says he's sold to "Visions," a new PBS dramatic anthology series. He says he'll play the lead role. The plot is, ah, unique.

"It's about a guy killed in a car crash," he said. "He goes to heaven and finds a vast film library with billions of films about everybody's life. And everyone who goes to heaven has to find his own film and look at it."

And, he says, there's talk at PBS about getting a grant for another series on Americana, but this one would be about "totally unsung American nonheroes, like a Class D relief pitcher.

"I want to do one about a day in the life of a used car salesman, fighting really unbelievable odds like the morning sales meeting where the boss says, 'I got 64 Dodges that gotta move today or else ...'"

Pidgin talk

Pidgin English, spoken by an estimated 50 million people around the world, originated in the 17th century when traders along the South China coast bartered for tea, silks, ivory, and jade. "Pidgin" reputedly is the Chinese contradiction of "business English." At least three-fourths of the words are derived from English but their pronunciation has been so changed and the grammar so simplified that only students of pidgin English can understand it.

ADMIRABLE HORN BLOWER — Band leader Harry James lets go with a blast on his trumpet at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York's Carnegie Hall last Sunday night. James' orchestra and that of Buddy Rich brought "big sound" excitement to the festival, according to Mary Campbell, AP music writer. "It was," she says, "a good evening for jazz fans."

James, Rich hits of jazz festival

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — The bands of Harry James and Buddy Rich brought "big sound" excitement to the Newport Jazz Festival in New York.

And the Ruby Braff-George Barnes Quartet, appearing Sunday night at Carnegie Hall between the two big bands, wove a delicate jazz lace between trumpet and guitar, with a second guitar and bass in close harmony.

One knowledgeable listener, after hearing trumpeter Harry James and his band end with "Two O'Clock Jump" and then return with an even more vigorous encore, "Sheik of Araby," said, "A man of his age playing trumpet like that — it's incredible."

And a jazz drummer in the audience, after hearing a Buddy Rich drum solo, said, "You didn't hear what you just heard because it can't be done."

Harry James' 16 musicians had a traditional full, big sound. They played well together with a few solos from James, a saxophonist and two dynamite trombone players.

James, 59, worked hard and sounded good. He mentioned from the stage that he played with Benny Goodman's band in 1938 in the first jazz concert ever in Carnegie Hall.

Buddy Rich, 58, with James' ensemble for seven years, has a young band of 16 musicians. They include the two most exciting sidemen heard during the evening, trumpeter Dick Hurwitz and soprano saxophonist Arnie Lawrence.

Rich's arrangements run to long solos for a number of players. Some of the charts are extraordinarily interesting, unusual and effective. "Lush Life," for example, begins with the trumpets sounding improvisational, barely touching the melody. Then the melody is played by one trombone, the band softly accompanying. The rest of the piece is played by the full band, with much tasteful harmony and countermelody.

Rich's trumpet men are crisp and together, giving the band an exceptionally good tone. Besides Rich's drum solo, the most exciting solo was one by Lawrence.

When the band finished, Rich said, "I've had some great bands in the past several years and this band tonight, although only four months old, is the best band I've ever played with."

It was a good evening for jazz fans.

Some of the finest carvings of antiquity survive today because the Persian capital of Persepolis was sacked in 331 B.C. A thousand years later, when Moslems occupied the ruins, they destroyed all sculpture they found forbade images — but missed those buried in the rubble. They were finally dug up by archeologists in the 20th century.

Ballet to play in L.A.

The Los Angeles Ballet will celebrate its first anniversary July 23-Aug. 10 with performances at the ABC Entertainment Center in Century City, Los Angeles.

One year ago the newly formed Los Angeles Ballet held its first performances at the Entertainment Center, under the direction of John Clifford.

Country star at Showcase

Buck Owens, "Mr. Country Music," with the Buckaroos and Lisa Todd, star of Hee Haw, will perform in the Showcase Theater of Magic Mountain, Valencia, at 8 and 10 p.m. Monday through July 12.

BUCK OWENS

Celebrating the approaching 100th anniversary of the Newhall Land and Farming Co., Magic Mountain's parent company, the train journey recreates the sights, sounds and experiences of an authentic excursion train. During the late 1800s, these trains introduced hundreds of thousands of Americans to the beauty and magic of Southern California.

The Grand Centennial Excursion narrow-gauge trains operated in a Tehachapi's mine for more than 60 years. The park redesigned and refurbished the original equipment to produce its newest attraction.

The Excursion and Magic Mountain's 50 thrill rides and attractions are all included in the park's one-price ticket. Shows by big name performers, fireworks, rock bands, folk groups and many other entertainment events are also included in the one price admission.

Otis Roy to sing on TV

Country-western singer Otis Roy, retired Pomona school custodian, will sing and yodel on KNBC-TV Channel 4 at 10:30 tonight. It is the repeat of a program shown a few weeks ago.

Roy, who served the school district for more than 20 years, specializes in bluegrass and country-western music in the style of Jimmie Rogers. He has won numerous prizes in entertainment contests throughout Southern California and has had two of his original songs recorded — "I Went Straight" and "Handful of Boxcars," both to music by Skip Graves.

MARTHA GRAHAM

Dancer submits to fate

Modern dance choreographer Martha Graham, who knew from girlhood that she wanted to be a dancer, says, "There are three Fates. They are responsible for life. The first and primary one is Necessity. The spindle of life rests on the knee of Necessity. The second one weaves that. The third one cuts the thread.

"Unless you have the Necessity to dance, you don't do it. If the demand in you isn't so great it splits you wide open if you don't do it, then I don't think you should touch it.

"Most people go so far and won't go farther. They know they're in danger of being destroyed. You have to submit to the Fates if you go on — submit your whole life."

CLASSIC BUST — Head of Sabina, a marble image of the wife of Emperor Hadrian, about 130 A.D., is one of the rare antiquities on exhibit at the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu. The museum, a replica of an ancient Roman villa, also houses world-famous Renaissance and Baroque paintings and examples of 18th Century French decorative arts. The museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays. Parking reservations are made at (213) 454-6541.

Library art rental popular

By C. G. McDANIEL

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Evanston Public Library's rent-a-picture service is so popular that users reserve their favorites in advance, just as they do popular books.

The library has a collection of 147 framed fine-art reproductions and 43 replicas of small pieces of sculpture.

Kenneth L. Knapp, head of the library's art, music and film collection, said in an interview that art rental services have become common in recent years in American libraries.

The Evanston library has reciprocal arrangements with a number of Chicago's other North Shore suburbs, so that residents of nearby towns and Chicago may use their towns' library cards to borrow from the Evanston collection.

Catalogs include small pictures and descriptions of the prints and sculpture available. The works are also listed in the library's general catalog, so that a reader studying a particular artist might borrow a reproduction of that artist's work.

Last year, 1,039 loans were made from the print collection, and 140 from the sculpture collection.

Knapp said the library had been adding new works over the past four or five years, but had reached the limits of its storage capacity so no new ones were added in 1974.

Some prints are in great demand and if they are out when borrowers ask for them the library reserves them when the prints are returned.

Most popular, Knapp said, are a still life by Lydia Kemeny called "The Red Chair" and a seascape called "Quiet Anchorage" by Bria.

The collection also includes many of the big names in art — Braque, Chagall, Klee, Monet, Renoir, Calder, Gauguin, Matisse, Rembrandt and others.

ART FOR RENT — Kenneth Knapp of the Evanston, Ill., Public Library, holds a copy of "Head of Noblewoman" as he stands beside a copy of "Hand of God." The library loans the works of art for display in homes. The collection includes 147 paintings and 43 small copies of famous pieces of sculpture.

"Everything by Monet has been out for months," Knapp said. This is the result of a major exhibition of his work at the Art Institute of Chicago, he explained.

The sculpture reproductions are largely from classical antiquity and include animal figures as well as humans.

Students at Northwestern University in Evanston and visiting faculty members are big users of the collection, Knapp said.

Music festival offers premiere

The American premiere of Heinz Holliger's "Pneuma" and an all-Bach program initiating a new Sunday afternoon series will highlight the second week of the Claremont Music Festival at Pomona College.

The second week's programs will begin with Monday night's first Institute Concert in Lyman Hall. These concerts are free to the public, and programs are not announced in advance of the performance.

Wednesday night's chamber music concert at 8:15 in Bridges Hall will include Bach's Suite for Cello in D, Ravel's Sonata for Violin and Cello, and Schubert's Quintet in C.

Friday night's orchestral concert (8:15, Bridges Hall) will offer "Pneuma," Stravinsky's symphonies of Wind Instruments, and Brahm's Violin Concerto with Charles Libove as soloist. Festival founder and music director Giora Bernstein will conduct.

Next Sunday the festival will hold its first Sunday afternoon concert in the 1,000-seat Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational at 4. The all-Bach program will feature Brandenburg Concerto No. 6; D minor Concerto for Two Violins; Sinfonia from Cantata No. 29; Choral variations, "Vom Himmel hock" (arranged by Stravinsky), and the chorus from Cantata No. 11: "Lobet Gott in seinen Reichen." Members of the Festival orchestra and the Louis Ronfeldt Chorale will be directed by Bernstein.

Tickets are available at Pomona College and at all Mutual agencies.

'Neon' to open in L.A.

"Neon," an exhibition by 10 Southern California artists, will open Wednesday at the Municipal Art Gallery, Barnsdall Park, Los Angeles.

"American artists have been using neon for more than a decade," states Virginia Kazor, gallery curator, who has organized the exhibit. "We are emphasizing the diversity of technique and creative intent. Each artist uses this material in a very personal and unique way to achieve a variety of aesthetic results."

Among the artists are Don Sevart, who constructs ordinary household items such as chairs in three-dimensional neon tubing; Bruce Nauman, using words to create visual puns and though provoking messages, and Larry Albright, whose works appear to be pieces of equipment from the laboratory of a mad scientist.

The other artists are Jessica Jacobs, Loretta Keller, Jeff Sanders, Joseph Steuben, John Uomoto, Stuart Ziff and Eric Zimmerman.

"Neon" will run through Aug. 3. The gallery is open Tuesday through Sunday, noon to 5 p.m., closed Monday. Admission is free.

A public reception for the artists, where the exhibition may be previewed, will be held Tuesday, 7 to 9 p.m.

Art sale set at Riverside

The Ferdinand Roten Galleries art exhibition and sale will be held in the Commons Central Lounge of UC Riverside from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Some 800 prints and original graphics by artists such as Daumier, Goya, Picasso, Miro, Hogarth, Zox, Krushenick and Matisse will be displayed and sold.

While several limited editions of major artists' works are priced at thousands of dollars, most prints in the show will cost under $100, some as little as $10.

For more than 30 years, the Roten Galleries of Baltimore, Md., has taken its collections to college and university campuses, to introduce the world of graphics — etchings, woodcuts, lithographs, and others — to students and to the public.

The collection includes not only the work of masters, but those of new artists who are receiving their first bit of exposure. Roten representatives will be available to answer questions about the artists and the prints.

The UCR show is sponsored by the Campus Activities Office.

Blindness no barrier to Southland man

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Sullivan is a champion wrestler, a water skier, sky diver, horseback rider, golfer, a graduate of Harvard where he rowed on the crew, a night club singer, musician, composer and author, a husband and a father.

Tom Sullivan is — incidentally — blind.

"You've got to understand that being blind is only one facet of being Tom Sullivan, explained the good-looking 28-year-old Palos Verdes man in an interview. "What you've got to do is get it in perspective.

"There are benefits in being blind and there are problems, but it has very little to do with the character of Tom Sullivan. You're not going to like him or dislike him because he's blind. You're going to like him or dislike him because he's a nice person or because he's a so-and-so."

Sullivan, who has been blind since receiving too much oxygen after his premature birth, calls it an inconvenience, rather than a handicap.

"Handicapped in our social terminology says 'I'm helpless, dependent, alienated.' Inconvenienced says 'All I have to do is find another way to the same job.'"

And he has found another way to do almost everything, from getting on the dean's list to parachuting from a plane with only instructions through a radio receiver to guide him to the ground.

He forced himself into such activities from a need to prove he was equal, admits Sullivan, who with Derek Gill has just written a book about his life, "If You Could See What I Hear."

"My other senses have become acute because of need, but I had to work at it," says the author, leaning over to pat his dog, Britt. "If you're standing at a corner and can't see the cars you learn to listen for the noise of traffic, to smell the gasoline, to bring the other senses into play."

Because of the added enjoyment in life that such sensitivity has brought him Sullivan plays games aimed at sharpening their senses with his two children, Blythe, 5, and Tom III, 3.

The personable young man with an infectious grin says blindness has been a "tremendous asset" to his marriage, with the couple's exceptionally strong need to communicate bringing them closer.

"We are intricately involved with each other," he says. "If I get a letter Patty has to read it to me. If I go to a meeting she has to drive me there and take notes. She can't tell me how she feels by the expression on her face; she has to verbalize."

On the minus side, he notes, is the attitude of the public, which is often one of false pity.

"People have segmented blindness," he declares, "and they tend to focus on the blindness as defining the person, rather than as only one facet of the person as a whole. I'm a reasonably intelligent man, yet when I'm with someone in a restaurant the waitress will turn to my companion and say, 'What would he like to eat?' Well, he can damned well tell her himself what he'd like to eat!"

Sullivan thinks special schools for the blind, deaf and retarded are helpful initially to provide needed skills, such as the braille and mobility training he received at Perkins Institute for the Blind. But after that, he favors integrating such children a few at a time in standard classes.

"The book wasn't written for the handicapped, unless you want to consider that each of us has his own sense of handicap — age, race, sex, appearance," he says. "It's only the story of a person who happens to be blind and who through tragedy and humor has learned that life is a question of dealing with the moment.

"Yesterday is a memory that can aid us in dealing with today. Tomorrow is a hope and a dream. You must focus on the immediacy of your life right now. Enjoy it, relish it, swallow it."

In addition to his family, Sullivan's life at the moment includes a home in Palos Verdes, Calif., a record album just out, books aimed at teaching children to use their senses being published and a novel in the works.

His dream includes a computer center to store data on all educational facilities in the country for the handicapped, for which he is helping to raise funds, and politics. "I want to be a shaper of things, not just a participant."

What would he most like, given a brief period of sight?

"I'd like to see my family, and I have a tremendous need to catch a 60-yard touchdown pass."

The highest waterfall in the world is Angel Falls in Venezuela with a drop of 3,212 feet, total for all its leaps.

STUDY IN FORTITUDE — Jackie Buckner, 22, is from Denton, Tex., and is blind. But she doesn't allow her sightlessness to keep her from her hobby of hitchhiking. She travels with a back pack and citizens band radio with which she can chat with truck drivers. The former North Texas State University student was photographed hitching from Denton to Des Moines for a job interview. She has been hitchhiking past five years.

A $450 solar heating unit

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — With $495 and a little land or a flat roof you can watch the sun rise and your utility bills fall, says a solar energy investigator.

"People will not buy solar energy because they like it, they'll want it because of the money they can save," says Gerald Falbel. The 43-year-old Stamford engineer has applied for a patent on a unit he calls FES Delta. Mounting the $495 system onto a roof or open space and running two pipes to a water tank can pay for itself in two years of smaller electricity bills, based on New York City rates, he claims.

A single unit can be used to help the conventional system heat water that will come out of your taps. Several units can help heat a home.

His system doesn't do all the work of the conventional system, but takes some of the load off it. The sunnier the day, the less conventional fuel used.

The system consists of a 55-gallon storage tank, two pipes and a collector, which has a flat front and a curved edge supported by a stand on the ground. The 8-by-8-foot front is angled toward the sky. The angle can be adjusted as the height of the sun in the sky changes with the passing seasons.

Direct and diffused rays are collected on both sides of the lower portion of the front. Falbel says his is the first unit that does that and saves money on the collector plate material, which costs $12 per square foot.

Water from the storage tank is pumped through one of the pipes to the collector, where it is heated by the sun. It returns through the other pipe.

Inside the storage tank is a smaller tank of water, which absorbs heat from the circulating water in the larger tank. It is the water from the smaller tank that comes out of your taps.

Unlike other systems, including one in Falbel's home, the FES Delta is mobile, more efficient, relatively cheap and can be hooked up to an existing house without structural changes, Falbel says.

A prototype of the system was installed in January on the property of R. Tek Nickerson, an environmental planner from adjacent Greenwich. Measurements are being taken there to find out how much heat is collected.

Nickerson says he thinks the system can cut his hot water bills in half.

He expresses fears for the future of the world and is trying to become as self-sufficient as possible.

"All of the signs are pointing toward disaster," Nickerson says.

"If you design with nature, you can have your cake and eat it too." He approached Falbel when he learned of the FES Delta.

Falbel says he's received about 25 inquiries from potential buyers. He has sold three systems, one of which is being used as a swimming pool heater.

For all its reputed potential, the FES Delta was relatively easy to develop. Falbel says it took a half hour to design and about two weeks to build.

"Optics takes no big calculations," he says.

His interest in solar energy dates back to 1962. Three years later he began building a house to be heated entirely by solar energy. But he lost $14,000 in the undertaking and gave up, he says.

'Don't crowd me:' they mean it.

CLEVELAND (AP) — A University Hospitals researcher says his studies indicate that when someone says, "Don't crowd me," he means it.

Humans need a kind of "body buffer zone" or personal space, and when that space is violated, flight — and possibly fight — is the normal reaction, said Dr. Leslie Lothstein, an assistant psychology professor at Case Western Reserve University.

Lothstein, whose research in the long-recognized theory of personal space has dealt with the relationship between aggression and increased interpersonal space requirements, said in a recent interview that such "human territory" may be involved when persons wind up in fights or as the victims of assault.

Persons unable to respond in a nonviolent way inherently need larger areas of personal space, Lothstein said. He called it a form of self-defense.

Lothstein suggested that teachers, school administrators and police consider concepts of personal space in dealing with hostility and violence.

"Sometimes just the laying of a hand by a policeman violates personal space and body space, and an individual with an inflexible set of boundaries may be provoked to violence," Lothstein said.

"When a person tells us to respect his distance, it may not simply be a challenge but a plea for help, and we must respect it," he added.

He also said the need may indicate that interrogation rooms in police stations should be larger, so an individual wouldn't feel personal space was being violated.

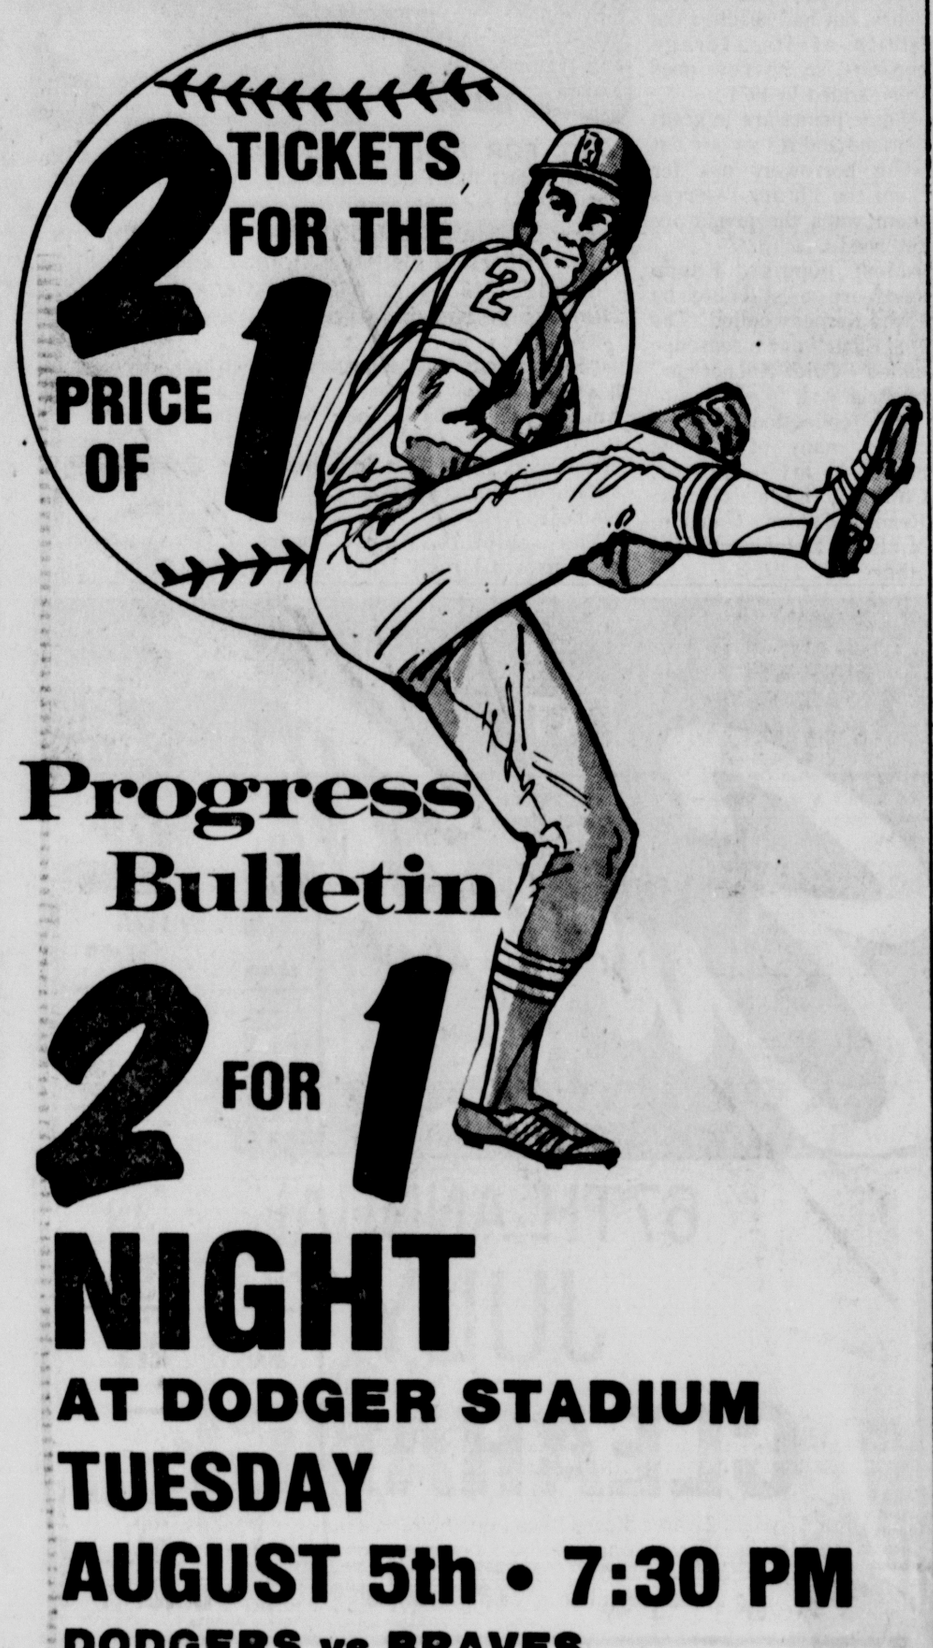

Lothstein said personal space boundaries may include one's car, which he said represents an external body armor to many persons.

He recommended that policemen stopping a car should have the occupant get out of the car, as many officers do routinely, so the occupant wouldn't be in a position of defending his territory.

He said research indieates that being approached by a person or object is seen as more threatening than approaching the person or object.

His research with young men showed that the degree of a person's aggression could be measured by the physical distance the person placed between himself and his adversary, Lothstein said.

Lothstein said he was attempting to devise a test for "assault proneness." Other practical applications which he said should be considered are training programs for those who work with violence potential and for desensitizing those who have abnormal need for space.

But best 6-month gain in 42 years

Wall Street takes a breather

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market paused for a breather this past week after completing its best calendar six-month gain in 42 years.

Confronted with continued signs of an upward move in interest rates, prices posted some spotty declines in slackened trading over the four sessions before the Independence Day holiday on Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.33 to 871.79 for the week.

But with its 5.87 rise to a 15month closing peak of 878.99 on Monday, the closely followed average managed to extend its advance for the first half of the year to 262.75 points.

That translated into a 42.6 per cent jump — the best on record since a 63.8 per cent surge in the first six months of 1933.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index showed a weekly decline of .45 at 94.36, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index was off .07 at 50.45.

Declines nosed out advances by a margin of one — 879 to 888 — among the 1,993 issues traded on the NYSE.

Most of the damage came in Wednesday's session, with the Dow falling 7 points amid rising anticipation of a prime rate increase by New York's First National City Bank.

Citibank, a frequent trendsetter on the basic charge on corporate loans, did in fact raise the rate on Thursday from 6¾ to 7 per cent — a level at which most other banks have been holding it for the past several weeks.

But news from the government of a drop in wholesale prices last month helped the market recover from some further early declines Thursday to close out the session with a slight gain.

Citibank's evident reason for increasing its prime rate was a recent uptrend in short-term open market money rates, which continued for much of the past week.

Opinion was divided on Wall Street over whether the upswing was merely a temporary result of some minor adjustments by the Federal Reserve in its credit policy, or something more.

There were some predictions that the trend, in any case, would prompt First National City to post a further prime rate boost, to 7¼ per cent, late in the coming week.

In another development Friday morning, the government reported a decline in the unemployment rate during June. But officials attributed the drop to a statistical vagary, and said it was too soon to tell whether the jobless picture was beginning to improve.

Texaco was the Big Board volume leader, down ½ at 26¼. About half the activity in the issue was accounted for by a 583,000-share Block trade at 26⅛ on Friday.

Recovery depends on many 'ifs'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If the harvest weather is good and the oil producing countries don't raise their prices and a capital shortage doesn't develop and the housing and automotive industries do better — we're out of the woods.

Which is to say that while things are looking up it doesn't take superior vision to see the potential obstacles scattered about the route ahead. They're there, but that doesn't mean the highway is blocked.

It is partly for this reason that you can take your pick of a variety of outlooks, most of them a bit better than those of two months ago but most also loaded with one warning or another.

Among the pocketbook issues, the biggest obstruction to recovery is likely to be the continuation of a relatively high rate of unemployment right through 1975 and into next year.

While the recession "for all practical purposes" might be over, as the Ford administration has viewed the scene, it is still deep and ominous and very painful in the view of labor leaders.

The May jobless rate was 9.2 per cent and could go even higher before the summer is out. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the rate will be near 9 per cent through 1975 and fall only to 7.8 per cent to 8.2 per cent by the end of 1976.

Such a rate of joblessness is bound to restrain any improvement in retail sales, automobiles included. It will deprive the nation of the use of productive skills. It will mean a drain on taxes. It might mean social crises.

One explanation for the poor job outlook is the number of other obstacles on the road to recovery. Business fears expanding too swiftly, lest it be caught far out on a limb. Expansion plans are still being cut.

As this wait-and-see attitude continues, production facilities remain idle and so do workers. Even when production begins slowly to improve, companies might be reluctant to hire proportionately, hoping for a time at least to obtain greater output per man-hour.

Over the next few months watch the news out of the U.S. farm belt and even from foreign countries. Record harvests are expected, but weather almost always deals a blow to human expectations. A poor harvest here, or almost anywhere in the world, could reduce the expected surpluses.

Will prices and interest rates remain relatively stable? Hope for the best, but keep your eye on them.

The consumer products inflation rate now is down to what many consider an acceptable rate — it was 4.8 per cent in May. But even the Ford people, who want to shine up the statistics, figure on about 7 per cent next year.

Interest rates all down the line are lower than they were last December and there has been only slight nervous jiggling upward. But economic activity is low; the demand for funds isn't great.

When economic activity picks up it will be worth watching for signs of rising rates. Some analysts fear that the heavy government deficit spending will crowd out private borrowers and force rates higher.

Yes, the country seems to be coming out of the economic woods. It can see the road ahead, but it will take some careful driving to drive a big vehicle like the American economy through the obstructions without a few scrapes.

Professor says it's possible

Dracula: really a patron saint?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The blood-quaffing ghoul Dracula may turn out to be the patron saint of the 70's, says a Transylvania-born English professor who teaches university courses in the monster classics.

"I'm not some kind of a creep," said Leonard Wolf, whose latest book, "The Annotated Dracula," is a scholarly delving into the monster classic. "I'm dealing with Dracula as a symbol."

Still, observed the grizzlebearded teacher with the piercing eyes, "there is still a tendency to connect me with my subject."

The 52-year-old Wolf conducts courses at San Francisco State University on the horror tale and monsters. Both, he said, are enthusiastically attended by students of both sexes.

Wolf admitted he gets lots of raised eyebrows when people learn he's from Transylvania, a region of Romania which movies have made synonymous with blood-hungry vampires and monsters given to popping out of their graves at the slighest whim.

I had the same birthplace when I wrote a book about Israel," said Wolf, "and nobody made anything of it then."

Besides, the professor hastened to add, "I'm utterly indifferent to the drinking of human blood, myself. I'm not at all interested in the occult, but I am interested in symbol."

And Dracula, he said, represents many of the significant changes taking place in the American culture.

The emerging interest of young people in the occult and in monster films got my head stirring," he said. "Horror films provide glimpses of religionlike experience. I suspect youngsters who do not have powerful church experiences get near-church from the films."

Foremost, he said, is the Dracula tale and its message to youth Dracula stays young so long as he drinks blood, Wolf said, contending that the Bram Stoker story mirrors the preoccupation with violence and sexual confusion.

Stoker, he said, was a Victorian who couldn't handle sexuality and transferred his fantasies to the vampire.

In the pursuit of information on his speciality, said Wolf, he came across a real, live vampire" who used to get his kicks drinking the blood of his friends and lovers.

Wolfe said he suggested therapy, but "I guess he was happy as he was."

Other human vampires have been brought to his attention, he alleged.

There's a Veterans Administration patient in therapy now— I won't tell you where—who wants to drink his uncle's blood," said Wolf.

Andrew Jackson, unaware that a peace treaty had been signed with the British, defeated a British army at New Orleans in January of 1815.

New Orleans' Superdome

By AUSTIN WILSON
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Louisiana Superdome has been called "The World's Biggest Pimple," "The Ninth Wonder of the World," "The $163 Million Misunderstanding" and "The World's Most Useful Building."

It has been Topic A in Louisiana since 1966 — in legislative debates, court fights, newspaper headlines and saloon squabbles. It has survived almost two dozen lawsuits and a year-long investigation by a special legislative committee. It currently is the subject of inquiries by city, state and federal agencies.

The Superdome rises 30 stories, squatting just off the central business district on 55 acres that used to be an industrial slum. Its roof covers 13 acres, and Houston's 50,000 seat Astrodome — once called the "Eighth Wonder of the World" — would fit inside.

Sections of Superdome seats slide on rails to change the arena's shape, and seating capacities can be altered from 19,000 for basketball to 80,000 for football or 97,000 for conventions.

Giant television screens suspended from the roof offer instant replays, but the screens can't be seen from 64 private suites or from many of the middle-level seats.

The exterior is striking. The Superdome is a huge circular structure whose curved aluminum sides are burnished gold in color and whose white dome is made of plastic sprayed on a steel framework.

Opening day was supposed to have been nine months ago. The Dome now is scheduled to open Aug. 9 with an exhibition football game between the New Orleans Saints and the Houston Oilers.

The Superdome began as a modest dream 10 years ago — a project of businessman Dave Dixon, who wanted to attract a National Football League franchise. Then Gov. John J. McKeithen latched onto the idea, and expanded it. He wanted an Astrodome East, not just a $35 million football stadium.

The governor wanted to "outbig" Texas.

An amendment to the state constitution created the Louisiana Stadium and Exposition District. The amendment was ratified by a 4-1 margin in a statewide referendum. Disgruntled losers filed the first lawsuits.

They argued in court that voters were fooled into thinking they were approving a $35 million football stadium when the decision already had been made to build a much bigger, more elaborate and more expensive structure.

The suits delayed construction for 18 months, until the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear arguments.

By the time bids were received early in 1971, construction estimates had soared. The lowest bid was $93.5 million, without the interest costs, the inflation and the "extras" that eventually drove the cost to $163 million.

Officials of the Louisiana Stadium and Exposition District decided to accept the bid, get construction underway, then ask the legislature for additional money to complete what came to be described as extras. These extras included four elevators o supplement the six included in the $93.5 million estimate, furnishings for 64 suites whose huge windows overlook the arena below, carpeting for ramps and halls, and facilities for stadium employes.

It was a request in 1973 for $8.25 million to pay for these extras that sparked a year-long investigation by a special legislative committee. The committee's 145-page report, issued last March, called for changes in the staff of the Stadium and Exposion District and suggested that state and federal laws might have been violated. The committee said that true costs might have been misrepresented and there might have been conflicts of interest in awarding contracts.

Mayor Landrieu has not commented on the committee's accusations, but other officials of the Stadium and Exposition District have explanations for their critics.

They note that the Stadium and Exposion District — by state law — is composed of the governor, lieutenant governor, mayor and 14 other top figures from state and city governments. It would be difficult to find a major businessman who had not contributed o one of their political campaigns, says Ben Levy, executive director of the Superdome organization.

Who's watching Interpol's watchdogs?

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Yet another famed and hitherto honored law group is falling on controversial times in the capital. Interpol, the cable address and popular diminutive for the International Criminal Police Organization, storied on television and theater screens for heroic battles against the forces of global evil, is currently being investigated by private and congressional probers who fear it may possess a potential for power abuse that goes even beyond that of the FBI, CIA, DIA, et cetera.

The problem as the examiners see it is this: While abuses in federally or locally chartered law agencies (such as the FBI) can ideally be ultimately control-led by government insistence, Interpol, being a private organization, is immune to similar U.S. sanctions. Its activities, then, being in the realm of free enterprise, are largely protected from federal control or interference.

What this means to America and American citizens, is not precisely clear. But some suspicious individuals and groups are trying to find out. One senate subcommittee, as of late, has determined that Interpol is so far embedded into the private sector of the nation that the public sector has only a foggy notion of what it is, hence the concern. What is this gaggle of international sleuths doing in our country and what are they doing to us?

Essentially, the bare facts of Interpol are fairly well known. It is, according to its literature, a collection of private investigators scattered in 120 nations and headquartered in Paris. Louis Sims, director of the Washington bureau, says the group has no enforcement powers but works entirely on the gathering of intelligence and dissemination of information. "When police in West Berlin want information on someone in New York, we will try to get that information and relay it back. And vice versa," he explains.

Beyond this popular image of Interpol, however, little else of the organization is widely known. The Washington office, for example, though private in nature, is supported financially and operationally by federal, state and local governments — and the U.S. taxpayer. America pays annual dues (currently $140,000) for membership in Interpol; the four men staffing the Washington bureau are on loan from regular U.S. law enforcement agencies. The Washington office itself, to the best of anyone's knowledge, is the only private agency housed in a federal building the U.S. Treasury.

And beyond these facts, not largely known though not secret either, are aspects of Interpol which are truly disturbing. Vaughn Young, who is conducting a private probe of Interpol for the Church of Scientology, says the group has a Nazi past that has never been adequately explained away. Young, who has photostats of documents to support his arguments, says Interpol was German-based and Nazi-controlled during World War II, and as recently as 1972 was led by a former Nazi officer named Paul Dickopf, SS Number 337259.

"Dickopf was president of Interpol from 1968 to 1972," says Young. "According to Nazi records he was an SS colonel during the early part of the war. Interpol says he was rehabilitated later in the war, and eventually worked for the allies, but I'm suspicious of this. Until a few years ago Interpol denied Dickopf was ever a Nazi."

Young, who says his church is probing Interpol in retaliation for an Interpol investigation of the Scientology sect, does not charge that Interpol has Nazi leanings today. He uses the World War II illustration merely to indicate the organization has sleazy origins, and, what's more, may be continuing at least some questionable contemporary friendships.

For one thing, Young wonders about Interpol's cooperation with authorities in totalitarian states such as Roumania and Yugoslavia: "What if Roumania was investigating somebody in Washington for political reasons, under the guise of police work? Would Interpol here cooperate? The thing is we don't really know, because as a private organization it reports only to itself — it owes no allegiance to our government or our people."

Though Interpol is, legally, completely separate from the American public establishment, it exists only because of a cooperative agreement with that establishment. The cop in Roumania who wants information on a Washington subject, will get it via Interpol who may get it via the Washington police or the FBI, or the CIA, or any one of dozens of interlocking public agencies. And once a file is thus collected, a copy is saved for Interpol records, thus the habits of many Americans are indeed at Paris Headquarters.

Clearly, the potential for abuse here is staggering. Strangely up to now, it has never been probed. Sen. Joseph Montoya (D-N.M.), who by virtue of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee he chairs, is, in fact, the first congressional figure in memory to hold a formal inquiry into Interpol.

Says he: "The most important concern is Interpol's possible threat to the constitutional rights of American citizens. We need to know, for instance, if the rules controlling the release of law enforcement information . . . between Buffalo and Topeka, should also apply between Washington and Bucharest."

Actually, says Vaughn Young, concerning Interpol, we need to know a lot more than that — "For our sake we need to know everything."

Pet cobra bites hand feeding him

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Maurice Keithley, 23, was recovering after his pet cobra turned on him and bit him several times on one hand during feeding.

Keithley, who keeps five poisonous snakes at his Riverside home, was transferred to Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center on Wednesday after being taken to Riverside Community Hospital.

Connors falls in Wimbledon upset

VICTORY AT LAST

Progress Bulletin
Sports
Pomona, California ■ Sunday, July 6, 1975

Ashe finally wins the big one

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Arthur Ashe not only became the first black man to win a Wimbledon singles title Saturday, he also erased a stigma which has followed him throughout much of his career.

Ashe, touted as tennis' next superstar even before he turned pro in 1968, had been known as a "choker," the guy who lost all the big ones. He had been playing here 12 years without gaining the final.

Then last May, Ashe's career took a turn. He won the World Championship Tennis title over Sweden's Bjorn Borg in Dallas.

And his 6-1, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 victory in the men's singles final over defending champion Jimmy Connors took him another step—perhaps the final step—toward establishing himself high in world esteem.

Connors, the world's topranked male tennis player, had been ranked as a prohibitive 2-11 favorite by English bookies, as most bettors gave Ashe little chance to beat Connors, who had not lost a single set in advancing to the final.

One man who was not surprised by the result was Ashe himself. The 31-year-old star from Miami told newsmen:

"If you are a good player and you find yourself winning easily, you are not surprised. I have seen Rod Laver go out and annihilate guys, and he's not a bit surprised."

Ashe won largely because he suddenly found the way to hit winning forehand volleys. That was the stroke that threatened to lose him his semifinal against Tony Roche of Australia two days ago.

This time he hit a stream of winning volleys on his forehand and Connors had no answer to them.

"Connors hits the ball so hard you only have to put your racket out and the ball just goes back itself," he said.

Ashe picked up a first prize of $22,000 and said this was his second greatest victory. His greatest triumph, he said, was when he led the United States to victory in the Davis Cup in 1968.

A crowd of 17,000, most of them backing the underdog, cheered Ashe to victory. Hundreds of them had slept out all night on the sidewalks outside the All-England Club.

Ashe and Connors had met three previous times, always on clay or cement, and Connors had won each time. This was their first meeting on grass— and it was the first all-American men's singles final in 28 years.

Connors continued making backhand errors, and the second set went the same way. Ashe could do nothing wrong and scored with a stream of forehand volleys.

"Come on, Connors!" shouted a man in the crowd when the champion trailed 1-3 in the second set.

"I'm trying!" Connors shouted back.

But his efforts brought him no dividends until he was two sets down and had his service broken to trail 2-3 in the third.

Then at last Connors began to play like a champion. He had two scorching returns and went on to break back at 3-3. It was the champion's first service break.

Throughout that set, Ashe was within sight of a straight sets victory. He had two break points in the first game, two in the seventh and two in the 11th. But he failed to turn them to account.

As Ashe served to save the set at 5-6, Connors hit three fine forehand returns and broke him.

That made it two sets to one. Connors' manager, Bill Riordan, and close friend Ilie Nastase of Romania stood waving their arms and shouting in the stands.

When Connors broke service for a 2-0 lead in the fourth set, it looked as if the match was changing course. He was hitting two-fisted backhands in his most spectacular style, and Ashe's first service had temporarily let him down.

Connors led 3-0. Ashe held his service for 1-3. And then Ashe hit another fine lob which started him on the way back. On the last point of the fifth game, Ashe sped across the court and whipped over a forehand, and Connors was taken by surprise and put a backhand volley out of court. Ashe had broken back.

Both men held their service to 4-4. Then Connors, serving, ran into a barrage of winning backhands from Ashe.

The champion made one atrocious shot in that game. He stood at the net with the court wide open and netted a forehand drop. He dropped his service, and Ashe led 5-4 and served for the match.

Off the next service, Connors knocked a half-hearted return high into the air. The crowd raised from their seats and cheered even before the ball came down. Ashe put his smash away and became the champion.

Connors, 22, had looked invincible when he pulverized Roscoe Tanner in three sets in the semifinals. But from the start of Saturday's final he was on the defensive. Ashe took the match by the throat and attacked.

Marty Riessen of Amelia Island, Fla., and Margaret Court of Australia defeated Allan Stone of Australia and Betty Stove of The Netherlands 6-4, 7-5 to win the mixed doubles title.

Sprinters pace Yank youngsters

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Paced by sprinters Houston McTear and Brenda Morehouse, the United States overpowered the Soviet Union in their fourth annual two-day junior dual track meet that ended here Saturday.

The victory by the Americans was a convincing one. The men's team won 129-105 and the women 88-58, for a combined score of 217-163.

American males broke three meet records and tied one while the girls set four marks and tied one. Russian men established three records and tied one while the women failed to set any standards.

Miss Morehead, 5-foot-3 and 111 pounds, from Toledo, Ohio, won the 100-meter dash in a meet record 11.4 seconds, beating the mark of 11.54 by Ludmilla Ushatik in 1974. The 17-year-old also ran the 220 in a record 23.2, breaking the standard of 24.34 by Miss Ushatik last year.

Miss Morehead also ran on the record-breaking 440-yard relay team clocked in 44.8, snapping the mark of 45.25 set last year by an American team of which she also was a member.

McTear, 18, was a premier attraction because of his world record tying time of 9.0 in the 100-yard dash two months ago.

The 5-7 McTear, a high school senior from Baker, Fla., ran the 100 meters in 10.2, tying the meet record by Michigan State's Marshall Dill in 1972.

McTear also was leadoff runner on the 440-yard relay unit timed in a record-equalling 39.6, a mark set by an American team in 1972.

The meet was held before 5,000 fans Saturday who sweltered in 95 degree heat in the University of Nebraska's Ed Weir Stadium. The temperature on the Tartan track surfuce was 124 degrees.

The heat prompted Russian team leader Tetr Stetanenko to observe, "Next year we will hold this in Siberia in the dead of winter."

The American men's team won in Austin, Tex., last year but the girls were defeated. In 1973, at Odessa, Russia, the U.S. was the overall winner, although the girls' team lost by one point. The initial meet in 1972 at Sacramento, Calif., was for men only, with Russia the victor.

Two contestants, or one team from each country, were entered in each event. The Americans swept six events, Russian women claimed first and second in the shot, and the Soviet men swept the javelin.

Two new events, the women's pentathlon and the men's decathlon, were added to this year's competition. Russia's Sergei Savelev won the decathlon with 6,835 points, followed by Anthony Hale of the University of Pennsylvania, 6,744; Dave Morey of Fisk University, 6,678, and Russia's Anatoliy Novikov, 5,833. The pentathlon was won by 16-year-old Nancy Kindig of Hastings, Neb., with 3,918 points, followed by Russia's Galina Zhilo, 3,737; Aili Alikso of Russia, 3,707, and Cindy Mitchell, 16, of Phoenix, 3,576.

Sun wins on Haden's heroics, 36-31

ANAHEIM (AP) — Rookie quarterback Pat Haden drove the Southern California Sun 96 yards the final four minutes, plunging in the final yard for the winning touchdown, for a 36-31 victory over the San Antonio Wings Saturday night in the first World Football League exhibition game of 1975.

A crowd announced at 15,722 watched as San Antonio came back after trailing 22-8 in the second quarter after both teams were unable to score in the opening quarter.

The Sun held a 29-16 advantage going into the fourth quarter.

Then Don Shanklin grabbed a 37-yard scoring pass from reserve quarterback Jim Ettinger and San Antonio burst into a 3129 lead with just over four minutes to play.

Haden, the former University of Southern California star, played the entire second half for the Sun, hitting on seven of 13 passes for 114 yards.

His Trojan teammate, running back Anthony Davis, had a 64-yard kickoff return to set up the first Sun touchdown in the first half and rushed for 62 yards on 16 carries as Southern Cal's leading ball carrier.

Don Shy dove in one yard at the start of the second quarter for the first Sun score. Lamonica set up the touchdown with a 40-yard toss to wide receiver Dave Williams to put the Sun on the 12 and Davis ran three times to get the ball to the one.

Hale hits first homer, scores winning run in Dodger victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dave Lopes' run-scoring single with two out in the eighth inning following an intentional walk to Willie Crawford gave the Los Angeles Dodgers a 5-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday night.

Rookie John Hale, who earlier hit his first major league homer, opened the eighth with a single off Ed Halicki, 3-6, and was sacrificed to second. Halicki struck out Steve Yeager but walked pinch hitter Crawford intentionally. Lopes then came through with his game-winning hit.

The Giants tied the see-saw struggle with an unearned run off Downing in the seventh on a two-base throwing error by Los Angeles third baseman Ron Cey and a single by Willie Montanez.

Dave Rader's two-run homer off Burt Hooton gave the Giants a 2-0 lead in the second inning. The Dodgers tied it in the third on Bill Buckner's single, a walk, Steve Garvey's run-scoring single and Cey's sacrifice fly.

Von Joshua's homer put San Francisco in front 3-2 in the fifth but the Dodgers took a 4-3 lead in the sixth on Cey's double and Hale's homer.

Jim Barr, the Giants' starting pitcher, was forced to leave in the second inning when his injured side flared up. He was replaced by Halicki, who gave up all the Los Angeles runs.

The Giants had a scoring chance in the first inning when Bobby Murcer doubled with two out, but Hooton got Montanez to ground out.

An inning later, though, Gary Thomasson singled and Rader hit his second home run of the season.

The Dodgers failed to score in the first inning against Barr despite two walks, a stolen base by Wynn and a throwing error by catcher Rader.

Halicki took over in the second after Cey opened with a single and Hale walked. He pitched out of trouble, getting Bill Russell on a fly ball, Yeager on a forceout and Hooton on a pop-up.

Figueroa, 7-4, gave up singles in the first inning to Bill North and Claudell Washington but then got Reggie Jackson on a grounder and Joe Rudi on a called third strike. The only other Oakland hits were a seventh-inning infield single by North and an eighth-inning double by Jim Holt.

The Angels scored their first run off loser Stan Bahnsen, 5-8, without a hit in the fifth inning.

Dave Collins led off with a walk, went to second on a wild pitch, took third on an infield out and scored on another wild pitch. Bahnsen had four wild pitches in the game, within one of the American League record for a game.

In the Angels' seventh, Collins led off with a walk and Morris Nettles ran for him. Nettles stole second before scoring on Rivers' single.

California missed out on a chance to score in the third inning. Singles by Rudy Meoli, Remy and Rivers loaded the bases with two outs.

Joe Lahoud hit a towering drive to left center field that Washington caught with a spectacular over-the-head grab.

Figueroa's shutout was his second of the season.

The A's threatened in the eighth inning when pinch-hitter Holt led off with a double. Don Hopkins ran for him and was left on second base as Bert Campaneris grounded to third base. North was called out on strikes and Washington grounded out to first base.

Escalera pounds Shibata

MITO, Japan (AP) — Hardhitting Alfredo Escalera of Puerto Rico Saturday night became the new World Boxing Council (WBC) junior lightweight champion by knocking out defending champion Kuniaki Shibata of Japan in the second round of their 15-round title bout.

The end came at 2:56 of the second round for the 28-year-old Shibata, who hit the canvas after a furious flurry of Escalera's devastating punches.

Escalera, 128¾, landed a hard right hand, triggering his all-out attack midway through the second round as he unleashed powerful lefts and rights to the champion's head and body. The taller challenger then caught the shorter champion on the chin with a one-two combination that finished the Japanese fighter.

A hometown crowd of 12,000 was dazed to see their ring idol hit the deck so fast and so early in the bout, in which Shibata, 129¾, was favored to retain his title for the fourth time. Shibata won the 130-pound crown from Mexico's Ricardo Arredondo in Tokyo in February 1974.

"My one-two punches sank the champion," Escalera jubilantly told newsmen in his dressing room. "I landed so many punches that I did not know which one decked him."

The smiling Escalera, who was unmarked, then added:

"I didn't move around too much in the first round. I just watched the champion's movement and strategy and also wanted to warm up my body.

"Shibata's punches were strong but mine were stronger."

The victory raised Escalera's record to 38 victories, including 31 knockouts, against six losses.

Escalera, a youth counsellor in Laguas, Puerto Rico, became the second World Boxing Champion from Puerto Rico this year. On June 28, Angel Aspada won the vacant world welterweight title by scoring a 15-round decision over Canada's Clyde Gray in San Juan.

Escalera turned professional after winning the featherweight title in the Golden Gloves tournament in New York in 1971. As a amateur he boasted an undefeated record of 37 victories, including 25 knockouts. It was Escalera's first crack at a world boxing title.

Escalera shot into the world boxing rankings by beating Mexico's Jose Luis Lopez, Panama's Antonio Amaya and Mexico's former junior lightweight champion Arredondo. He entered Saturday night's fight as the No. 8-rated WBC contender.

Shibata was the fourth Japanese fighter to lose a world ring title this year. It was his 12th championship bout.

AND STAY DOWN! — Angels first baseman John Doherty doesn't seen to want Oakland A's second baseman Phil Garner to get up in the fourth inning Saturday at Oakland. Garner had leaped to grab a high throw from catcher Gene Tenace and came down in a pile on second as Doherty slid in for a steal. The Angels won 2-0.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Art Wall held off a four-way challenge with a steady two-underpar 70 Saturday to win the $130,000 Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament, his first victory since 1966.

Wall, whose successive fiveunder-par 67s for his first three rounds were his first scores under 70 this year, finished with a 17-under total of 271, one stroke ahead of young Gary McCord, who birdied his last four holes for a final-round 67.

Rod Curl, tied with five others four strokes off the pace after three rounds, played his first nine in one-over Saturday but birdied five-under-par 67s for his five holes between 12 and 17 for a closing 68 and 273 total. Gibby Gilbert, three strokes behind after three rounds, and Dave Hill finished at 274. Hill shot a 69 and Gilbert a 70.

Wall birdied his second and third holes but bogeyed No. 8 as McCord, a second-year pro who ranks 101st on this year's money winnings list, began his charge.

McCord, one of the six tied at four strokes back after three rounds, made the turn in a four-under 32. A birdie on No. 9 left the 1970 National Collegiate Athletic Association champion from Cal-Riverside one stroke behind and 15-under for the meet. He bogeyed the 11th, however, and posted a doublebogey on the par-three, 186-yard 14th hole.

McCord then finished with his four birdies, but Wall all but wrapped up the victory with a bird on No. 16. Wall played the last two holes in par.

The tournament attracted only two of the current 25 leading money winners—Miller Barber and U.S. Open champion Lou Graham—because of next week's British Open. Barber, first-day leader with a 65 over the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course, finished with a 70 and a 279 total. Graham failed to make the cut.

Curl, one of the few pros planning to go to Britain after playing here, said he would have cancelled his travel plans had it not been for his fine finishing round.

"It's a great, great feeling. I worked hard to get what I got," said Wall, voted golf's player of the year when he won the Masters and three other tournaments in 1959, but not among the top 100 money winners this year. His last victory, excluding eight triumphs on the Caribbean tour, had been in the Insurance City meet in Hartford, Conn., in 1966.

"When it got down to the wire like that today, I knew a lot of people were making a run at me," he said. "I haven't been used to that the last few years. It was almost like a new experience, but I felt good inside and believed in my swing."

Wall and McCord played in the last threesome, so Wall was fully aware of his young partner's hot streak.

"I wasn't surprised Gary made a birdie on that last hole," he said. "I felt he would before his second shot but I wasn't too concerned. I felt I could get down in two putts for a par and I did."

Wall, who had said earlier in the week he has been contemplating retiring after 26 years on the tour, wouldn't say his victory had permanently reversed his fortunes.

"It is not my character to say this is going to change everything," he said. "I've always taken everything one step at a time.

"But it certainly is a big boost to be able to play under pressure again," he said. "I've done some choking in my time, but I didn't choke all week."

McCord, whose best previous finish had been a sixth place tie at Quad Cities last year, registered 11 birdies, three eagles and two pars on the 16 par-five holes he played in the tournament.

He said he felt throughout the tournament that he could win and didn't fold after taking a disastrous double bogey five on the 186-yard 14th hole.

"That was my stupid hole," he said. "I tried to get cute and hole it against the wind, and I can't do that. It was an easy little six-iron shot and my only bad shot all day. I duck-hooked it way to the left into some fluffy kind of grass and just messed up the rest of the hole."

Burns qualifies for British Open

DUNDEE, Scotland (AP) — George Burns, a member of the victorious U.S. Walker Cup team last May, Saturday joined the already formidable American lineup for the 72-hole, $165,000 British Open golf championship, which begins at Carnoustie, Scotland next Wednesday.

The 26-year-old Burns, who turned pro last Monday, was the star performer in the 36-hole qualifying competition over the famous old course at St. Andrews, shooting a three-under-par 69 in the second round. It gave the New Yorker a seven-under-par total of 137 and placed him at the top of the 23 qualifiers who now link up with the 61 exempted players.

Burns, after going out in a par-matching 36, streaked away from his rivals with a sparkling three-under-par 33, which included a powerful burst of four birdies in six holes.

More than 500 players on four courses—St. Andrews old and new, Panmure, and Monifieth— were attempting to qualify.

One surprise was the failure of Ireland's Christy O'Connor to qualify. He had a second-round of 75 at Panmure for a total of 148.

Japanese names on honor roll

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Japanese names went on the honor roll of the Wimbledon Tennis Tournament Saturday for the second time in history when Kazuko Sawamatsu of Japan and Ann Kiyomura, an American of Japanese extraction, beat Francoise Durr of France and Betty Stove of The Netherlands 7-5 1-6 7-5 to win the women's doubles title.

In Wimbledon's 98-year history, the only previous Japanese winner was Ryuki Miki, who teamed with Dorothy Round of Britain to win the mixed doubles title in 1934.

Miss Durr continued her bridesmaid complex. She has now been in the Wimbledon women's doubles final six times, with various partners, and has lost every time.

Ruffian's stiffest test

The unbeaten 3-year-old filly, proclaimed by many as the greatest of her sex in turf annals, is favored to make it 11 in a row by whipping the winner of the Kentucky Derby in this battle of the sexes that has quickened the heartbeat of horse lovers.

The 1¼-mile sports spectacular is expected to lure a record crowd of 83,000 and go down in turf history as one of the great sports spectaculars. Post time is about 6 p.m. EDT, and the race will be nationally televised by CBS.

Ruffian, known for her effortless style of running, has been on top all the way in each of her 10 starts. That is why she has been proclaimed by some as the greatest filly of all time.

Still, because the daughter of Reviewer has raced only against her own sex, many believe she can prove her supremacy only by beating Foolish Pleasure.

It will be a stern test.

"Ruffian's tough, but we're going to test her," Leroy Jolley, trainer of Foolish Pleasure, said. "The only way to beat her is to run with her. We'll test her all right."

Since most match races have been won by the lead horse, it seems that Jacinto Vasquez, Ruffian's jockey, and Braulio Baeza, astride Foolish Pleasure, will bust out of the gate lickity split and stage a speed duel to get in front.

"You won't see any 48-second half (mile)," said Eddie Arcaro, famed retired jockey who has ridden in and seen many match races. "This will be a heck of a race. It will be a survival of the fittest."

Both horses are fit and have been sharpened for speed as their workouts attest.

"I've done everything I know to make her ready," said veteran trainer Frank Whieley Jr., after Ruffian's recent five-furlong work in 58 1-5 seconds. Clockers termed it "easy work."

Foolish Pleasure has been a come-from-behind runner this year, but "Don't forget," said Jolley, "as a 2-year-old last year when he was unbeaten, most folks thought he was just a speedball who wouldn't get the classic distances."

Foolish Pleasure showed he has all the speed with an eased up workout in 1:09 1-5 Thursday. Ridden by Baeza, the colt went the first quarter in 22, the half-mile in 44 4-5 and five furlongs in 56 2-5 before finishing out the six furlongs eased up.

Foolish Pleasure's last start was in the Belmont Stakes at 1½ miles on June 7 where he lost to Avatar by a neck in 2:28 1-5. Ruffian also ran in the Coaching Club American Oaks June 21, also at 1½ miles, which she won by nearly three lengths in 2:27 4-5.

Fans who sport "I like Ruffian" buttons point to her better time for the 1½ miles and also to the fact that she is bigger and heavier than Foolish Pleasure.

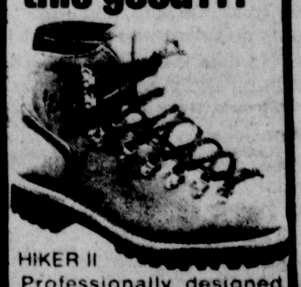

Wearers of "I like Foolish Pleasure" badges recall that someone usually puts the knock on the Florida-bred but somehow he has managed to survive and has won $746,107 for owner John L. Greer. The son of What A Pleasure never has been out of the money in his 14 career starts. His record shows 11 victories, two seconds and one third.

Ruffian, a Kentucky home-bred owned by Stuart Janney, Jr. of Maryland, has earned $313,429 in her 10 starts. She can add $225,000 to that if she beats Foolish Pleasure. If not, she gets the loser's share of $125,000.

The New York Racing Association, which arranged the match, bills it as a "$400,000 Match Race, richest purse in American turf history." However, $50,000 of that went to Mrs. Robert Lehmann, owner of the preakness winner, Master Derby, "whose gracious withdrawal made this race possible."

Foolish Pleasure will carry 126 pounds to 121 for Ruffian, who benefits from her sex allowance. There will be betting on the race.

Tee to Cup

Open over, not forgotten

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

Back from the U.S. Open at Medinah, Ill. — The crowd came early on the final day, hundreds taking up their positions on the treacherous water hole, No. 17, some three hours before the first group was scheduled to hit off the tee. No sports' spectators paid so much ($11 with $3 parking rates) to see such little action.

Patient, waiting U.S. Open spectators rarely get a clear view of the action. Once in a while, they see Arnie or Nicklaus swing the club, but the action is blocked out by the heads and shoulders of those who come early, squat down at one hole, and stay for 10 hours. Many of the 20,000 plus golf fans were content to pace around the respected course, gaze at the 1924-built clubhouse and watch the action on the giant score boards.

They waited and waited. Hundreds lined up at refreshment stands on these hot, humid, sweat-producing days, many for as long as 45 minutes to buy a coke. One man, weary of waiting, gave a lad $5 to wait in line at one of the 16 stands bo buy him a cold drink.

The course itself, other than the long, 200-yard par threes was not awesome; no match, in my opinion to the wind-blown fairways and deep rough of a Pebble Beach. Nevertheless, Medinah snarled everyone. The quick greens, tight doglegs knocked the best of the best off the title trail.

U.S. Open Notes . . . With action ending late Sunday, I watched Gary Player all alone on the practice tee, hitting woods with a definite slice. Player had just finished skying to a 77 and wondered why.

Great group on practice tee just before Sunday's play. I listed Lou Graham, Doug Sanders, Jim Wiechers, Al Geiberger, Bud Allin, Gary Player; then along came Arnie Palmer and later Jack Nicklaus. The players moved out a little leaving room in the middle in front of the stands for the two stars.

Especially interested in Sanders' swing — fast, short backswing, head in front of the ball, moving through too quickly, but nevertheless banging them out straight and far. One wonders what really makes a good golf swing.

Medinah Club house — sophisticated, irreplaceable, spacious.

The crowd — very gentle, moving, but appreciative of all good golf . . . rooting for all contestants to do well.

The trip — tiresome, frustrating at times, but Open was worth it.

Ralph Beard on final day on first hole with three strokes — tight, drawn, much like a man heading for his execution . . . finishes with 78 . . . Pat Fitzsimons on same tee — relaxed, loose . . . finishes with 77. Who knows?

All indications point to an early "sell out" for the fifth annual Dick Whittinghill Invitational Golf Tournament, Aug. 9 at Los Alamitos, as competitors from previous years rush in their $200 checks to be among the 72 amateurs who will be paired with 18 celebrities in the charity event.

The $200 entry fees, like all revenue from gallery tickets, go to Resthaven Community Mental Health Center in Los Angeles.

Again this year golfers will get more than their "money's worth" with a pairing party dinner, official tournament sweaters, a host of tee gifts and golf prizes, night at the races and awards dinner for them and their guests, and many other "extras" which have become features of Whittinghill's annual-celebrity event.

Jim Le Blanc, controller for National Golf Courses, Inc., didn't have far to count on the 7th hole of Pomona National's South course. Le Blanc holed a wedge shot on the 105-yd. hole for his first hole in one.

Americans can't cope with natural disasters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are unprepared for catastrophic natural disasters like massive earthquakes, giant hurricanes or torrential floods, two scientists said Monday.

The federal government's activities in the area are misdirected and too many people — from state and local officials to private citizens — ignore lessons of the past or new research findings which might mitigate a disaster's toll, they said.

The scientists, Gilbert F White and J. Eugene Haas, both of the University of Colorado, paint a gloomy picture in a report released Monday. Their work was supported by an $800,000 grant from the National Science Foundation. The report was published by the MIT press.

The report is an assessment of research on natural hazards and what future directions such research should take White and Haas also sought the advice of dozens of other private and government scientists and disaster relief experts.

" the preponderant federal investment in natural hazards research is in studies which enforce rather than reduce the likelihood of catastrophe," the authors said

"Redirection of federally funded natural hazards activity could sharply reduce human suffering, substantially curb the nation's annual billion-dollar disaster-caused economic losses, and bring about a marked reduction in federal and state expenditures required to cope with such losses," they said

Too much emphasis has been on finding ways to use technology to solve natural hazard problems — earthquake prevention or hurricane seeding, for example, they said

White and Haas called for equal emphasis on research into social, economic and political factors

"It is not a question of more technology or less technology, but of technology in balance," they said

White and Haas listed examples of lessons learned from past disasters that are ignored They called for research to find out why people don't heed these warnings and how they could be better put to use

Why, they ask, are earthquake engineer's new construction requirements ignored?

Why are building codes in many communities toughened, but then not enforced?

Research should be directed to find out "why some school systems in tornado-prone areas hold regular tornado drills, but most do not," they said

Although millions of Americans steadily are migrating to coastal areas where they might one day be subjected to hurricanes, White and Haas said much building is done without also providing adequate means of evacuating an area before a storm

Progressive or disciplined?

Alternative...

Chris Hollibush, coordinator of Milwaukee's Rainbow School, is bemused as she recounts the eight frenetic weeks in 1972 when she and several other parents decided to start their own alternative school in an old apartment building.

"It's a process that keeps evolving," she shrugs. "Every year we have more kids, but fewer desks and fewer chairs." Rainbow is one of the more successful counterculture schools started throughout the United States by idealistic young people in the '60s.

Although times have changed, many parents believe that these alternative schools still are the best way to pass on their values to their children. The New Schools Exchange Clearing House in Pettigrew, Ark., lists 1,200 privately run "alternative" schools in communities around the United States. They have 50,000 children enrolled, mostly in the grades prior to high school.

"My 13-year-old daughter Robin started at a public high school last fall after two years at Rainbow," Ms. Hollibush says. "She felt very ignorant. She didn't know all the facts and figures the other kids did. The amount she doesn't know about geography astounds me.

"On the other hand, she's already had two books of poetry published."

It was more important for Robin, Ms. Hollibush believes, to spend her years at Rainbow grappling with new ideas and concepts than memorizing the Gettysburg address or conquering the rudiments of algebra.

There have been no comprehensive studies of how students from alternative elementary schools — which meet education standards in most states if they have certified teachers and if students attend a certain number of days each year — perform later in public high schools.

But alternative education's supporters say most of the graduates are not handicapped by a lack of basic information because their eagerness to learn allows them to catch up to their classmates in traditional schools quickly.

Rainbow, which rents the apartment building space it uses, finished its third full academic year in June and is therefore older than most alternative schools now operating. It's also more structured than most.

During the school term, all 50 children (the oldest 12) spend the first hour of the day on language or math. Teachers wander from room to room, occasionally lecturing to all, but more often stopping to help individuals.

The children sit, stand, walk, hop, wiggle, lie on the floor, talk and yell, seemingly at will.

"We try to work on basic skills as unobtrusively as possible, says Ms. Hollibush, who prefers that designation. "Reading a traffic sign is reading, and measuring a table is math. We don't try to push anybody into anything."

The rest of the day is spent in informal classes, studying subjects selected by the teachers and students for that month. Topics include city living, war, pollution, union organizing, geology. And there is individualized activity for students who prefer to curl up with a book.

Most free school teachers are young and underpaid. Many work only for room and board in cooperative communities born as farm communes. Some are drawn to alternative schools because they will be able to say and do what they want; others simply couldn't find "real" teaching jobs.

Rainbow's three teachers, one for preschoolers and two for elementary age students, each earn $400 a month.

Frank Lindenfeld, a free school founder in the 1960s when he was a sociology professor at the University of California at Berkeley, says the alternative movement will continue to grow as long as the teaching job market is tight.

"It might continue for several more years," says Lindenfeld, now a professor at Cheyney (Pa.) State College, "as teaching graduates find it increasingly difficult to obtain public school jobs and find alternative schools that provide them with work, if not necessarily with money."

"Public schools teach people to hate learning," Ms. Hollibush declares, and Scott Davies, 21-year-old director of the Bay City Alternative School in Green Bay, agrees. "The students who do well here do so basically because they feel they were being held back in traditional schools," Davies says.

Rainbow evaluates its students regularly in handwritten notes from teacher to parents. A few alternative schools grade with the usual ABCs, but more simply give students straight A's.

Public education's defenders, meanwhile, argue that alternative schools are too undisciplined and inject too much political bias into the young, on everything from Vietnam and the military to police and drugs.

They say the danger is that the products of alternative schools will not be able to adapt their counterculture upbringing to the real world.

ALTERNATIVE WAY — Part-time teacher Joe Toner hands out roses to Milwaukee's Rainbow School pupils. It is one of the most successful alternative schools in the nation.

Old fashioned...

DENVER (AP) — Students enrolled in an experimental "old-fashioned" school have scored well beyond expected levels on standardized achievement tests.

Students at the Fundamental School in suburban Jefferson County gained as much as two years in basic skills over the six months the school has been in operation.

"Our whole idea is based on order, discipline, high moral standards, respect, courtesy," said school principal Paul Rold.

"We expect the children to be well-behaved. Teachers and children know what to expect of each other."

That part of the school's philosophy, Rold admits, is "old-fashioned," but he contends that old-fashioned does not necessarily mean outmoded, as shown by the test results.

The school — one of several of its type in the nation — was started at the request of a group of parents under the Jefferson County system's "alternative school policy," which provides for experimental programs to be set up if enough parents want them.

About 300 children are enrolled in grades kindergarten through sixth at two locations — a set of cottages and an old school building which had been phased out.

The school stresses basic skills — reading, math, writing — and teaches them to a large extent by drill.

"When a child is finished with the third grade, he should know his multiplication facts. He should not have to look them up on a chart," Rold said.

"We believe rote memorization is the way a child is going to learn the basics. When he has those, he can go on to exploration kinds of learning. He has the tools."

The school uses a phonetic approach to reading. Its foundation program takes 16 weeks. At the end of it, the students can read, Rold said.

"Our children read fabulously," he said proudly.

The achievement tests showed students performing "well beyond" the levels that their intelligence quotients would indicate.

Only students in the sixth grade failed to score above national norms. In 16 randomly selected cases, half had gained two years or more. In 23 cases, half had gained more than one year.

A record 43 million Americans, or one out of every five of the population spent $270 million on state hunting and fishing licenses in 1974.

ESPERANDA LA ULTIMA PALABRA — Trabajadores de la industria textil mantienan una demonstracion enfrente de las oficinas de la Confederacion General de Trabajadores en Buenos Aires, esperando la respuesta de la Union a la orden de la Presidenta de la Republica, Isabel Peron, para que sean rebajados los aumentos de sueldos. Los obreros tamien demandaron de los dirigentes de la Union que rompan con el gobierno peronista.

El problema del estranjero ilegal

El Sr. Schabarum dijo que esta junta es solamente para discutir el sistema que obliga al Gobierno Federal a mantener estos servicios extendidos al extranjero ilegal.

El Supervisor Schabarum aconseja al publico que desee testificar, que el dia 4 de agosto sera la reunion referente a este importante asunto que nos atane a todos los residentes del Condado. Los que deseen participar, que dirijan su peticion por escrito al diputado Sr. Sal Reza, 956 Hall of Administration, 500 W. Temple, Los Angeles, California, antes del jueves 17 de julio, 1975, o llamando al telefono (213) 974-4111.

Programa introducira chicanos a ingenieria

El programa de Introducccion de Minorias a la Ingenieria (MITE) de UCI, senalado para agosto 17-29, es uno de los 23 planeados para este verano en diferentes universidades a traves de los Estados Unidos, bajo los auspicios de un Consejo de Ingenieros para el Desarrollo de la Profesion (ECPD) y algunas fundaciones e industrias deseosas de contribuir al progreso de la carrera. El programa es gratis para los estudiantes participantes.

La participacion en el programa esta abierto a 25 chicanos y chicanas que hayan completado sus primeros anos de escuela superior y estan capacitados en ciencias y matematicas. Actualmente se estan aceptando las solicitudes. MITE y otras instituciones estan tratando de resolver las necesidades peculiares de negros, portorriquenos, americanos nativos y otras minorias de estudiantes.

Las aplicaciones para el programa patrocinado por UCI pueden enviarse directamente al Dr. Paul D. Arthur, School of Engineering, University of California, Irvine. 92664.

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Just across the Falls Road from St. John's Church in the heart of Catholic West Belfast is a city cemetery where most of the graves are Protestant.

That cemetery provides one small example of how Catholic and Protestant clergymen are trying to defuse the sectarian war that has taken the lives of more than 1,200 persons in this British province over the past 5½ years.

For years Protestant funeral processions came up the Falls Road and passed through the cemetery gates. Catholics took little notice of them. But then came the sectarian riots of August 1969 that sparked the current spate of troubles. Protestant funerals in the cemetery became rare and relatives were afraid to visit the graves.

Finally a Church of Ireland minister came to see the pastor of St. John's, the Very Rev. Canon Padraig Murphy, 61, a tall, strapping man with a reputation as a peacemaker in his native Falls Road area.

Father Murphy called on his parishioners to organize welcoming committees for Protestants to visit gravesites on designated days. The Catholics used cars, buses and ambulances to transport the visitors, and thousands of Protestants took advantage of the opportunity.

"We couldn't guarantee their safety," Father Murphy said in an interview at his parish house, "but just by being there in such numbers nobody bothered them."

Father Murphy said such ecumenical exercises are still possible in the midst of turmoil and sectarian hate because the vast majority of the people of Northern Ireland "are good, practicing Christians who don't believe in violence."

He laid a good part of the blame for the current troubles on the predominantly Catholic Irish Republican Army, an outlawed guerrilla group fighting to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and unite it with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Father Murphy said his 20,000 parishioners at St. John's and at the sister Church of Corpus Christi in the nearby Ballymurphy area "have suffered more from the violent men in their midst than anybody else has.

"I've gone to more homes here of people who have been killed by the IRA, not by anybody else," the white-haired priest said. "I've had to denounce more murders committed by the IRA from the pulpit than by anybody else. I've seen more people lose their homes, their property, their cars, their self-respect at the hands of Republicans than at the hands of anybody else."

Asked what sort of reception his parishioners give these denunciations, Father Murphy said: "One hundred per cent assent, agreement and praise afterwards — always."

The Falls Road area, inhabited overwhelmingly by poor, working-class Catholics, was a focal point of the August 1969 riots and has been a chronic trouble spot ever since. It is a stronghold of the IRA, and hundreds of Catholic families, particularly in sectors that abut Protestant enclaves, have been driven from their homes by waves of rioting, firebombing and shooting.

Wide strips of houses lie barricaded and abandoned. City authorities have laid coils of barbed wire, built walls of concrete blocks and bricked up the windows and doors of the vacant houses to prevent snipers from one side shooting at the other.

Father Murphy estimates that about 50 of his parishioners have been killed, mostly by IRA bombing and gunplay, secondly by the British Army in clashes with the IRA and thirdly by Protestant assassins.

HUD official sentenced in bribe case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal housing official has been placed on two years probation for accepting gifts.

Lee A. Merriwether, a Los Angeles area official of the U. S. Housing and Urban Development Dept., pleaded guilty June 16 to accepting $1,200 worth of carpeting in 1974 and $400 in cash in 1971 from local contractors in exchange for helping them prepare their affirmative action reports.

"STOMACH ULCERS DON'T BOTHER ME"

Says Bert DeMeter, Printer, 2619 Alvira St., L.A., "I have been suffering from an ulcer for many years and spent lots of money for treatments and all kinds of diets, but it keeps coming back. In 5 weeks under Dr. Wing, I felt like a new person. I did not lose any time from work. No more poached eggs and milk, and I can eat all my meals in restaurants. It is a blessing to order regular meals again. It has been over 3 years and I am still feeling fine."

Career workshop for women set

A workshop in career advancement for women will be conducted in Claremont July 16-19.

It is designed for women moving into positions of supervision, management and administration in institutions of all kinds. Cathleen A. Brown, who holds a doctorate in psychology and education, will conduct the workshop as part of the Claremont Graduate School summer session.

"Capable women hired into executive jobs often get intimidated or inhibited by being in a new position," Dr. Brown said.

"Very able people seem to get scared or they don't produce in the way that had been expected. This program is intended to make more visible those people who are qualified and who do have special talents."

Enrollment is limited to 30. The training sessions will emphasize participation in demonstrations of problem-solving methods. Among the areas to be covered are learning to assess one's own abilities; dealing with aggression and negotiating disagreement; analyzing problems and designing solutions; expressing ideas clearly and concisely in both oral and written communication; understanding the essentials of financial planning; and using research effectively.

Admissions information may be obtained by writing Career Workshop, Claremont Graduate School, Claremont, or by calling 626-8511, extension 3688.

Jan. 21, 1924, Lenin died and the struggle for power between Trotsky and Stalin began with the latter eventually winning.

CHERI WYLIE

September wedding planned

Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Wylie of Pomona announce the engagement of their daughter, Cheri, to Garry Jackson of Costa Mesa.

The bride-to-be is a student at Orange Coast College and is employed by Five Crowns, Corona Del Mar. She is a 1969 graduate of Ganesha High School.

Mr. Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Jackson of Southgate, is employed as a salesman in Los Angeles.

The future bridegroom served in the Marine Corps and was stationed at El Toro. He is a 1968 graduate of California State University at Long Beach. He was a member of Kappa Sigma, Blue Key and a senator at large.

The couple will be married Sept. 5 at the Wayfarers Chapel in Palos Verdes.

Citlaltepetl, 18,701 feet, is the highest peak in Mexico.

Baptist women to meet

Speakers will be Mrs. Zorita Classen, Mrs. Robert Gire and Miss Carol Chapman. All are returned missionaries. Mrs. Classen served with her husband in Korea for 10 years. Their daughter, Mrs. Gire, was born there. Mrs. Gire and Miss Chapman served as summer missionaries in Alaska last year.

The combined board and missionary meeting is scheduled in room 212 at 9 a.m. The brunch will be in the gym at 10 a.m., and the program will follow at 11 a.m.

No reservations are necessary. Child care will be provided.

New way

The sweater look which is flattering to most figures will be stronger than ever this coming season. It is interpreted by designers in coats, suits and dresses.

Scalia-Schouten vows repeated

The garden of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Scalia in Pomona was the setting for the marriage of Wynette W. Schouten of La Verne and Peter J. Scalia of Claremont.

The couple was married by Judge Clifton L. Allen in an afternoon ceremony followed by a reception at the Scalia home.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Olive M. Wolf of Yuma, Ariz. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Scalia of Montreal, Canada.

Mrs. Charlene Jones of La Verne was honor attendant. Serving as best man was Anthony Scalia of Pomona.

The newlyweds will honeymoon in Mexico City and Acapulco and will be at home in La Verne.

Women sponsor clinic

The Diamond Bar Woman's Club has planned a rabies clinic in Diamond Bar in cooperation with the Southern California Medical Association and the Los Angeles County Animal Control.

The clinic will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Lorbeer Junior High School, Diamond Bar Boulevard.

Residents may obtain the vaccine for their dogs at cost basis and licenses may also be obtained at the clinic with proof of vaccination.

Joyce Brothers

Changes in income

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband and I are in the upper-income bracket but since the recession has hit, you'd think we were facing starvation. I'm shocked by my husband's behavior these past few months. I'm also disappointed because he seems only to be interested in the stock market and how much money he has in the bank. He never used to be so selfish and so limited. He just seems to have no flexibility and I believe it would kill him if we had to sell our house and move to a smaller one. I'm not saying I'd like it, but to me, it wouldn't be the end of life.

We've had discussions about his personality change, but I must confess I don't understand or like it. Sometimes, I feel I'm living with a selfish stranger. — S.O.

Dear S.O.: Often, the worker in a higher-income bracket feels more personally involved in his profession than the lower-income worker who may change jobs more frequently and sees himself as an individual apart from his vocation.

People who live on lower incomes are better able than many higher paid professionals to adjust and cope emotionally with economic crises. Dr. Harold Visotsky, chairman of psychiatry at the University of Chicago's medical school, says a lower-paid worker who loses a job may have to live on a little less, but the loss of a job for the professional may result in a major change in life style. The lower-bracket man doesn't change his style of living much. It may mean staying home more and going without some small luxuries, but to the person who's been living above his income, it may mean moving to a new neighborhood, making new friends and getting rid of a number of possessions.

It helps if men are able to keep their perspective on present economic problems so that they don't see them as a personal attack, but rather as a hardship that everyone is facing.

Some Americans have taken a totally different approach from your husband's and have decided to use the recession as an excuse for a much needed vacation. A Miami psychologist reports that Florida's record-breaking tourism business may reflect a kind of enjoy-yourself - while - you - can philosophy that some are using to fight off depressed spirits and anxiety. Some choose to give themselves vacations so they are better able to relax when they return and to survive whatever hardships they must face.

I realize you may not be able to convince your husband that this is the time to take a break, but you may be able to help him rebudget so that you can avoid major changes in your life style. How people react to change depends a great deal on their state of mind before these changes become a necessity. Hardships can be an adventure if one prepares himself. Most of us rely much too much on material comforts and often when we are forced to do without all the extras, we're thrown back on those more enduring pleasures, such as conversation with family and friends and enjoying good books.

You can also help your husband by reassuring him that you value him for what he has to offer as an individual, not just as a family provider. This will help to prepare him for eventual retirement as well as help to ease him over the present crisis.

GROWING PAINS — Dr. Robert Kiste and his wife, Valerie, walk near their home in Jonathan, Minn., amid the pleasant surroundings that make it worth living 25 miles from Minneapolis. There are 2,200 residents in Jonathan, first of 14 new towns across the country, born seven years ago as an experiment in future living. The town is now having financial problems.

Model city program has growing pains

JONATHAN, Minn. (AP) — Dr. Robert Kiste has a stake in the $21 million dream that is this village in the woods, lakes and rolling hills southwest of Minneapolis.

Indeed, his 7-year-old son likes it here so much that he told his mother she should be a kid again so she could grow up in Jonathan.

But 7-year-old eyes don't read the debit sheets on this project that was the first of 14 "New Towns and Model Cities" scattered around the nation — experiments in living that were to find answers to the problems of land planning, home design, pollution, schools, mass-transit and other aspects of metropolitan living.

The U.S. Congress authorized financial and technical help to approved developers. But almost all of these experiments are in trouble today, and money is the reason. Consider Jonathan:

Born seven years ago, it was authorized $21 million in federal mortgage guarantees in 1970 and was to house 50,000 people by 1990. It would be a designed balance between residential, commercial and recreational areas. Commuter trains would whisk workers the 25 to 40 miles to their jobs in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and others would work at companies that moved into Jonathan.

But today, there are only 2,200 residents in what is called Village One, the first and only residential area completed. There are no commuter trains, and Bob Kiste for example drives an hour and a half roundtrip to his job at the University of Minnesota where he is an associate professor of anthropology. It doesn't bother him. He spends three days a week at the university, two at home reading and writing. His home has office space at a walkout level that opens on an expanse of rolling terrain.

"For my kind of work, it's a beautiful place," he says. "It's like country living, quiet and peaceful. It's a delightful place to live and raise children."

Not necessarily for the people who built it.

The Jonathan Development Corp. has had to ask the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for advances of $468,000 and $340,000 to meet interest payments.

Bruce Nimmer, third president of the corporation in a year, says he's trying to line up another company to take over the mortgaged 6,000-acre spread.

The model cities program began in 1968 with HUD looking for functional, pleasant styles of living, as opposed to the haphazard, subdivision on subdivision jigsaw puzzle of the suburbs.

Johathan is not the only new town in trouble. HUD says that almost all, but not all, of the 14 model communities are having difficulties. Some blame changing times, inflation, and changing money supplies. Others say the federal government has not helped enough. As a result of the problems, some of the new towns might become carbon copies of what they were supposed to replace.

Under laws passed in 1968 and 1970, HUD was authorized to guarantee up to $50 million worth of each developer's bonds, plus interest on the bonds, plus technical assistance, plus financing for roads, schools, sewers and other facilities. But some developers have charged that the federal government has withheld funds for the new communities program.

Some new towns are healthy, at least for the time being. Woodlands, a 20,000-acre project 30 miles north of Houston, Tex., that has preserved much of the site's existing forest, reports no present money problems. And Maumelle, a development 13 miles from downtown Little Rock, Ark., is busy with its construction program.

Otto Stolz, the HUD official in charge of the new community program, says almost all the 14 projects are in financial difficulty. He says most developers have planned the financing of their projects poorly. He also says there are a limited number of people willing to buy homes in these experimental communities.

Stolz pointed out that financial failures wouldn't mean people would be thrown into the streets at these new towns. The land simply would be sold to other developers, and the people there would stay if they chose to stay.

Cal Poly studies waste treatment

Cal Poly Pomona and the Boise Cascade Corp. have begun a research study to identify problems of waste water treatment and disposal in new housing communities without access to municipal sewer systems.

Many of the Boise Cascade homes will be constructed in small communities or rural areas of the west where waste water disposal systems are either non-existent or inadequate, said Larry Geyer, general manager of Boise's manufactured housing division.

"We have no intention of letting our homes create an environmental problem," he declared. "That is the reason for the Cal Poly study — to help us study the waste water disposal systems that will meet all regulations and enable these communities to fit into their environment."

Ray Morales, chairman of Cal Poly's civil engineering department, said the waste water study will be completed later this year. Principal investigators are professors Julie Wei and Donald Wells.

"The problem isn't an easy one because of the amount of waste water involved," said Morales. "From 60 to 80 gallons of waste water are generated by each person each day. Thus a new 250-unit community might require a disposal and treatment system with a capacity of 100,000 gallons a day.

"In the past, outlying communities have used septic tank systems with large leaching fields. These systems, however, are simply not consistent with today's water quality standards. In fact, leaching of septic tanks effluent is now prohibited in many areas."

The Cal Poly study team will explore the "state of the art" of available waste water handling systems, evaluate these systems, determine the availability of equipment and components, perform a cost analysis of the most promising possibilities and recommend the most efficient system.

"From our work to date, we're convinced that adequate systems are available today," said Morales. "Our challenge will not be to develop new systems but rather to select the best one. There may not be just one solution.

"Since each area has its unique environmental problems, it's probable that no one system will be best for all areas. In the end analysis, we'll probably be recommending a range of solutions. We'll narrow the field down to the most efficient systems and Boise Cascade can then select the best system for a given area."

The Boise executive said these solutions will be important to his firm because of the growing demand for manufactured housing. He estimated that 25 per cent of all new homes now come from factories and believes this will increase to 50 per cent by 1985.

Speaker set for meeting

Demos Carras of the California Division of Industrial Welfare will be speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the Apartment Association, Mt. Baldy area.

He will discuss the minimum wage, manager contracts and compliance with laws governing apartment management and custodial employes.

The program will start at 7:30 p.m. at the Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association building, Foothill and Indian Hill boulevards, Claremont.

Homes too costly for some incomes

NEW YORK (AP) — According to an old and often violated rule of thumb, a family can afford to pay 2½ times annual income for a home.

Since the median price of the typical one-family home now is between $36,000 and $37,000, and median income is around $13,000, that rule, if applied, would mean a good many Americans would be given the thumb.

Presumably they would instead continue to rent. But, say the economists of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, problems are presented in that direction too. And the major problem is, of course, price.

Saul Klaman, chief economists of the savings bank group, observes that it is increasingly difficult for developer-builders and bankers to come up with economically viable plans for multifamily dwellings.

Rising land, material, money and labor costs have plunged that segment of housing into a deeper depression than most people realize. After peaking at about one million units in 1972, the annual rate now is just one-quarter of that.

It is for this reason — the depression in multifamily, rental units — that the association remains relatively glum about housing's future.

"It looked a little better in the past few weeks," says Grover Ensley, executive vice president. "We're optimistic for a slow pullout, but a few weeks ago the scenario looked pretty bleak."

Still, adds Klaman, "We remain relatively bearish on housing." No sharp upturn is foreseen, he explains. Whereas the construction rates for all new housing units is about one million a year now, he believes it might reach 1.3 million by December.

Housing, it seems, is beset by one problem after another, and some of them together. Just a few months ago some forecasters expected the influx of savings to stimulate more mortgages, and it has, but not sharply.

Both consumers and bankers seem reluctant, hesitant, uncertain.

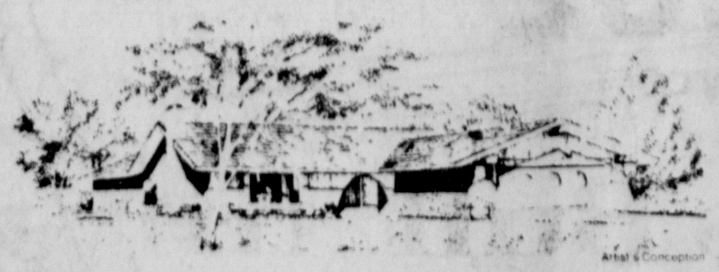

The potential buyer balks at rising prices and mortgage rates that remain higher than he can adjust to. The banker doesn't like the interest rates any more than the buyer, but for another reason.

The banks are almost mortally afraid of being caught with long-term, low-intrest loans on their books

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

WESLEY DELONG OF OCALA, FL, ASKS:

"WHAT MAKES GOOSE PIMPLES?"

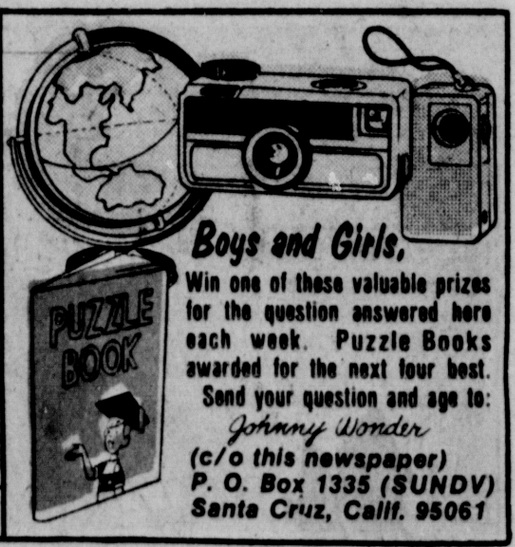

WHEN YOUR SKIN GETS COLD, TINY MUSCLES AT THE HAIR ROOTS TIGHTEN UP. THEY MAKE THE HAIR STAND UP AND PRODUCE LITTLE BUMPS, OR GOOSE PIMPLES, ON YOUR SKIN. THE SAME MUSCLES MAKE THE HAIR OF CATS AND DOGS AND OTHER FURRY ANIMALS STAND UP, TOO. BECAUSE THEY HAVE SO MUCH MORE HAIR, THIS FORMS A WARM BLANKET FOR THEM. BUT GOOSE PIMPLES WITHOUT A THICK HAIR BLANKET WON'T KEEP YOU WARM. YOU NEED TO PUT ON EXTRA CLOTHES WHEN YOU ARE COLD.

DEAR POLLY — As an energy saver, I use a sheet blanket instead of a top sheet under my electric blanket. This is so cozy and warm that I have the electric blanket on very low, or often not at all. — B.P.A.

•

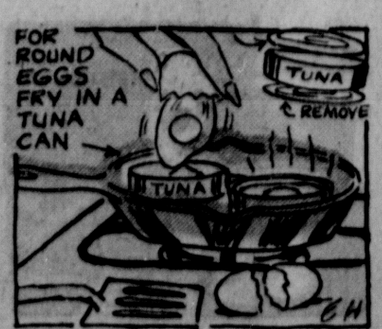

DEAR POLLY — I sew frequently. It's both time-and energy-saving to put the ironing board under the top of the sewing machine table that folds out when the machine is being used. One can iron a seam or whatever without having to get up. — An Ohio Reader.

•

DEAR POLLY — We are senior citizen campers, with a make-it-easier cooking Pointer: Oil used for frying is much easier to use when put in a plastic squeeze bottle after it has been thoroughly cleaned in soda water and rinsed. At least a dozen of our camper friends have adopted this idea. — MRS. W.M.

•

DEAR POLLY — Wanting to have nice, round, fried eggs, a friend and I discovered that removing the top and bottom from a 6-ounce tuna can made a perfect egg ring and cost nothing. Place such a ring in the frying pan, melt butter, add the egg and have a beautifully rounded one! — NANCY.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, % this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — When pouring a thick substance such as hand lotion or whatever from one plastic bottle to another and the bottle into which it is being poured threatens to overflow, squeeze the rounded sides. The substance being poured will flow right into the bottle without overflowing — J.T.

'BROKEN TREATY'

"Broken Treaty at Battle Mountain," a film documenting the struggle of the Western Shoshone Indians to regain 24 million acres of Nevada land, will be shown Monday at 8PM on KCET, Channel 28. Actor Robert Redford, himself involved in the Indian movement, narrates this look at the tradition and culture of the Shoshone Indians and the treaty in question, signed in 1863 by the Shoshones and the U.S. Government.

The Indians claim the treaty promises them the land. The federal government claims the right to buy back the land from the Indians — at 1863 prices, or $1.05 an acre. The land is equal to one-third of the state of Nevada.

Much of the story is told by the Indians themselves, as the camera follows them in confrontations with government officials over the tearing down of the sacred pinyon tree and the killing of deer for sport. The viewer is permitted to observe the Indians as they work, dance and pray, and again as they attend a meeting where they are offered money for their land. Most of the Indians are seen to resent the price ($1.05 an acre) but to fear that if they hold out, they will get nothing.

Following the 60-minute film, Hugh Downs will moderate a discussion of the issues highlighted by Freedman's documentary.

BILL ARMSTRONG: GAME SHOW VETERAN

Bill Armstrong is a producer, a television host, an actor, an announcer and a sports enthusiast, but, as the saying goes, not necessarily in that order. Presently, Bill is the host of Liar's Club, seen weekly over KTLA, and the producer-announcer of Celebrity Sweepstakes, seen Monday through Friday over NBC. In addition, he is the announcer on the nighttime version of Sweepstakes, seen over the ABC owned and operated stations, and in syndication.

But then Bill has always been a very busy man. He thrives on activity and when he's not hosting, acting or announcing, he's out there putting together shows of his own for his own Bill Armstrong Productions, or with Peter Marshall for Marshall-Armstrong Productions.

He is a veteran in the game show field having spent the past 10-years working on them from one vantage point or another. Bill spent five years on Hollywood Squares, first as a part-time writer, later as the producer. He received two Emmy nominations as the producer. In 1973 he threw up his hands and candidly, categorically announced, "I quit."

In 1974, Bill started up again with Sweepstakes and then went into his hosting job on Liar's Club. He is a firm believer that producers of game shows also make the best hosts because, says he, "You are actually producing the show as the host. You're the one who must keep it moving, work out the time problems, keep the guests and contestants in line and happy and give and take their freedom."

'WOMEN IN SPORTS'

What Would You Like To Be When You Grow Up, Little Girl? How about a television producer, a sportscaster, a cameraman (camera-person?) or a communications specialist? That's what these four women are doing for ABC Sports, which, as its slogan goes, is "recognized around the world as the leader in sports television." The scene is the recent Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle Golf Championship at Mission Hills Country Club in California, where the talented quartet played key roles in bringing live television coverage of the golfing action to millions of viewers throughout the United States.

Unusual to find women holding down important jobs in the traditionally male-oriented world of sport? Not really. As Eleanor Riger puts it, "Female sports-consciousness has been raised considerably over the past few years and the time is ripe for the distaff side to have its turn at the dial. "To this end, we are using more and more women in front of and behind the cameras in what has been—up to now—a man's game."

Mrs. Riger became the first female staff producer in television sports when she was named to that post by ABC President Roone Arledge in 1973. In addition to her golf coverage, she is a regular producer for ABC's Wide World of Sports and has produced ABC television specials including the "Colgate Women's Sport Special" in 1974 and "Skiing Free—The National Women's Freestyle Skiing Championships" earlier this year.

Behind those cameras Eleanor Riger was talking about is Diane Biederbeck, a comely blonde who got into camera work through an unusual route—succeeding at another aspect of the business. While working as a film editor for television station WSMW in Worcester, Massachusetts she won the Boston Press Award for excellence. At that point, she realized that she would be hard-pressed to move out of her editor's job at any station in the Boston area, so she headed West and ended up working for NBC News on a sport basis during that network's 1972 election coverage. She was hired by ABC as relief camera operator later that year and has been with the network since. Her most harrowing experience on the job—ABC's "California Jam" telecast. "There were over 200,000 screaming rock fans at the Ontario Motor Speedway in California for 12 solid hours, and if that wasn't frightening enough, there was a bad cable underfoot, and every time I accidentally touched it with my foot, I felt like I was in the electric chair."

Cathy Duggan, a solid LPGA touring pro out of Lauderdale Lakes, Florida, turned adversity into advantage last year when an accident on the golf course put her on crutches and out of action. ABC had been looking for an articulate and attractive young woman to be a guest expert for the 1974 Dinah Shore tourney. And, since she would be unable to play because of her leg injury, Cathy was an ideal candidate. The arrangement worked out so well that she was signed on for last year's U.S. Women's Open and again served as expert commentator for the 1975 Dinah Shore. Cathy has studied both in France and Switzerland, and is probably the only U.S. Sportscaster who can describe a chip shot fluently in French, which she—intentionally or not—has occasionally done.

Charlotte McKervey came to ABC just last year from the New York Telephone Company, where she had been a Service Advisor and a Computer Systems Analyst. Although most people wouldn't realize it, that background was ideal for her current job. To cover any live sports event, ABC must have a tremendous working relationship with the local telephone people. An average golf telecast, for example, might require the installation of several hundred telephone instruments and up to seven million feet of wiring. Then, there are the network lines which carry the telecast signal to the switching point and on back to New York where the live coverage goes out to the network. Charlotte McKervey has to know what facilities will be needed, how they can be properly installed—and, who to holler at if anything isn't working properly as the clock ticks down to airtime.

Producer, camera operator, sportscaster and communications specialist—four talented women who have made their mark in network television. And, at ABC Sports, they're joined by Sportscasters Billie Jean King and Donna deVarona and a growing number of female production assistants, associate directors and other key production personnel.

Sky Sailing!

"Learning to hang glide is easier than learning to ride a bicycle," says James Coleman who stars as marksman T.J. McCabe in ABC's S.W.A.T. (Mondays at 9PM). Jim, a former Air Force Academy cadet, took up sky sailing nearly two years ago when he was living in a commune near the Oregon coast. Three months later he was making a living as an instructor. "A few years ago," says Jim, "there were only a few hang gliding buffs on the west coast. Today, there are about 35,000 enthusiasts around the country. It's one of the safest sports I know of. Accidents occur when people get careless, over confident. People get upset when they read about injuries and deaths, but when you consider how many people are hang gliding these days, you realize that accidents are actually rare. More people are hurt riding bikes and walking across streets."

Jim's sky sail is a Seagull III whose basic design is referred to as the Rogallo type (after designer Francis M. Rogallo). It is constructed of Dacron and aircraft quality aluminum tubing. Its rigging is stainless steel. On weekends, he usually glides over Torrance Beach, a few miles south of Los Angeles. Catching a gentle uphill breeze, he sails at speeds of about 18-miles an hour, soaring to altitudes of 200 feet for minutes or hours, depending on wind current and personal durability. Actress Ronne Troup, who also happens to be Jim's girlfriend, is his number one student these days. "Ronne has heard me describe the free, mellow feeling I get from gliding," Jim says. "She hasn't gone up yet, but she will eventually. I'm not prodding her. Maybe it's better that she spend time watching and helping me maintain my sky sail. She's learning a lot. The first thing she learned is that there are no hang gliders built for two."

'A BANKING, SINGING, ACTING, DANCING DAD?

A bank vice president who co-stars on a network comedy-variety series? If that program concept sounds incongruous, it becomes believable when you meet Ray Heatherton, who, with his dancing daughter, Joey Heatherton, headlines the new Joey and Dad show which has its premiere Sunday at 7:30PM on CBS. A ruddy-complexioned, gregarious man, Ray has never strayed far from the Long Island area where he was brought up and where he now holds the imposing title of vice president of community relations of European-American Bank and Trust Company.

"I imagine it was my interest in community affairs that brought me into the banking business," guesses Heatherton, who had a long radio and musical comedy career before stepping into the world of finance 15 years ago. He remains active in community projects like the March of Dimes, the Myasthenia Gravis Assn., the Nassau Society for Crippled Children and Adults and the Boy Scouts.

Despite an entertainment background that includes singing and dancing in such musicals as "Babes in Arms," "The Desert Song," "The Chocolate Soldier," "Burlesque" and "Can-Can," and children's popularity as "The Merry Mailman" on New York television, the senior Heatherton has never appeared professionally with his daughter until the opportunity developed to star in Joey and Dad, for four weeks on the Network. It will be a proud moment for him when he takes his first television bow with Joey, whose show business success started as a Broadway understudy in "The Sound of Music" and has taken her to Hollywood for television and motion pictures and back again to New York as a star of the supper club circuit.

Actually, the head of the Heatherton clan has never removed himself completely from the entertainment world he loves so well while devoting the major share of his time to the banking business. He still hosts a popular morning radio program, the Ray Heatherton Breakfast Club Show, on Long Island station WGBB. Another source of pride for dad of Joey and Dad is son Dick, a disc jockey familiar to New York listeners on WCBS-FM.

"She can still show Joey and me a thing or two as a dancer," says Ray. Which could be an idea for an upcoming Joey and Dad show.

A GROUP FOR ALL PEOPLE

After 22 years, it's happening for Gladys Knight and the Pips. The new supergroup is making it big! Big! BIG! and getting ready to play for their biggest audience ever when NBC airs their summer series starting Thursday at 8PM. Taking part in the fun will be super guest stars, including Robert Goulet, Sally Kellerman, Sammy Davis Jr., Ben Vereen and Paul Williams, plus others.

"That's our job," Gladys says, "to entertain. I am a public servant. I really mean that." And she really does.

It all started at a family party back in Atlanta. The Pips are brother Merald, and cousins Edward Patten and William Guest. Pip is the nickname of another cousin James Woods, who encouraged them to turn professional and even got them their first jobs around Atlanta. While Gladys is the star, she always makes it clear that she's part of a group. "The group has really taken care of me. They made sure I grew up the right way."

Hearing Gladys and the Pips on record—even blockbusters like "I've Got To Use My Imagination" from "Claudine—"can't be compared with seeing them in person. They're entertainers of the old school who give it all they've got every time they step into the lights. Needless to say, they've paid their dues. Back in the 50's, they played the bottom of the bill on endless tours back and forth across the South and the Midwest. But they were learning, learning, learning.

Then in 1961 they cut "Every Beat of My Heart" on the old VeeJay label and watched in amazed delight as it took off and earned them a gold record. The next stop was Motown Records, and while they scored some additional gold discs for their soul music, it wasn't until they came under the management of Sidney Seidenberg and signed with the Buddah label that they started expanding into the new fields that grabbed the white audience as well.

Today they are enjoying the super success that makes any artist wonder what the next step will be. Gladys and the guys are talking television, movies and everything in between. She says that she would like to spend less time on the road, but the group has no intention of putting any barriers between themselves and the live audiences.

They make their home in Detroit, and like any mother, Gladys worries about her children, a son and a daughter just going into their teens. One reason she is so excited about the television series is that she feels a regular season show, which could easily develop, would give her more time at home. That remarkable voice that reflects experience and dignity will be heard, on the stage, on television and wherever Gladys Knight and the Pips are found.

'THE CHICAGO CONSPIRACY TRIAL'

The USA versus David T. Dellinger and Others

There were 23,000 pages of trial transcript which formed the basis of this British-American co-production using an all American cast. Every word in the production was spoken in court. Every incident is described in the court reporter's transcript. It airs on KCET, Channel 28, Thursday from 9 to 11:30PM.

1968 was the year of the assassinations of Dr. Martin Luther King and of Bobby Kennedy. The Democratic Convention which met in Chicago was held against a background of bitter demonstrations that led to violence and rioting. Before the Convention, 12,000 regular police had been reinforced with 6000 armed National Guards and 6000 regular troops. Four days of rioting resulted in the arrest of a number of leaders of protest groups. Judge Julius Hoffman presided over their trial. The program was abridged from the transcript of that trial.

Two subsequent Appeals Court decisions dismissed the conspiracy charges while upholding the charges of Contempt of Court. All charges against Bobby Seale were subsequently dropped after his separation from the original trial.

The leading performers are Morris Carnovsky as Judge Julius Hoffman, Ronny Cox as Jerry Rubin, Al Freeman Jnr. as Bobby Seale, Cliff Gorman as Abbie Hoffman, Robert Loggia as Leonard Weinglass (Defence Attorney), James Patterson as William Kunstler (Defence Attorney). The U.S. Attorney Thomas Foran is played by Shane Rimmer with Neil McCallum as Richard Schultz, the Assistant U.S. Attorney. Christopher Burstall directed.

This documentary drama made by the BBC could not be shown publicly in America while the case was under appeal. This is its first showing to television audiences as part of the Hollywood Television Theatre 1975 season.

An Expert's Advice: What Wives Can Do To Save Marriages

Chairmen of the Board? No, They're Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart, Leaders of the Jazz Revival (See Page 10)

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ANITA LOOS

Every time I turn around there is another road company of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," or Carol Channing is taking it to London, as she is now. How did you happen to write it, and who was the inspiration?—G.D.D., Cambridge, Mass.

● Jealousy was the inspiration, my dear, just plain jealousy. It wasn't money at all. I had no idea I was writing a book.

I was simply burned up because the man I cared about at the moment, H. L. Mencken, the writer from Baltimore, was going around with a dizzy blonde. I was simply showing him what a terrible mistake he was making, by writing a funny letter picturing her as the dumbest blonde in the world. I wrote this thing about her and I sent it to him and, wouldn't you know, it didn't succeed in breaking them up. He simply sent back a note saying if I added some more pages to it, he thought I had a book. And he kept right on dating his blonde!

FOR BART STARR, coach of the Green Bay Packers

Do you think it's right for teams like the Vikings to be able to have 14- and 15-man defensive huddles from which they convert into 11-man huddles at the last moment, thus confusing the opposing quarterback?—Craig Cleek, Kingsport, Tenn.

● No, I don't think 14- or 15-man huddles are in order, and I'm glad to report that the new rules will prohibit such actions.

FOR RONA BARRETT, author of "Miss Rona"

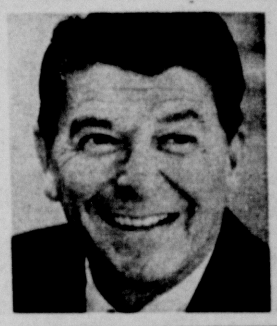

Why do you always pose so that only one side of your face is visible?—Betsy Wrights, Costa Mesa, Calif.

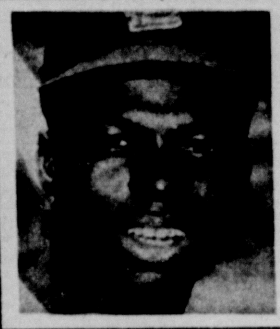

● I'm afraid if you saw all of me, you wouldn't want to take all of me!

FOR RONALD REAGAN

Can you tell me about your four children? They're never mentioned in the media.—Mrs. Clyde North, Charlottesville, Va.

● Only one of our children—Ron, soon 17 and a high school junior—is at home. Press attention would understandably embarrass him. Patti, 22, is aspiring to a musical career, especially composing. Mike and Maureen are grown. Mike is doing very well in the boat business, and Maureen, I'm proud to say, is a talented radio and TV talk-show hostess.

FOR LOU BROCK

When I see an athlete like Bill Walton refusing to play when he's hurt, I think how you have played many times while aching. What's the difference between you and Walton?—Bill Ford, Austin, Texas

● I've played for manager Red Schoendienst for 11 years now. When I tell him I don't feel well, he says, "Yes, Lou, I know. But even when you're sick you're better than anyone I can put out there." So I play. Walton needs somebody to talk to him like that.

FOR LUCILLE BALL

I've always admired your makeup. Any tips for the rest of us?—T.C., Santa Fe, N.M.

● Use a makeup table with everything close at hand. Don't rush; do things leisurely, otherwise you'll look like a patchwork quilt. I don't use sophisticated creams. I go for soap and water. I brush my hair vigorously every morning and night, and think a pedicure is as important as a manicure. I like bright lipsticks and use the brush kind. Vitamins are great for nails and skin, and the best exercise is stretching.

What's the hardest part about acting on a show like "Little House on the Prairie"?—Karen Graessle (age 9), Hartsburg, Mo.

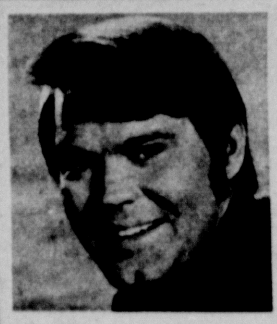

● The hardest part is getting up at 5 a.m., before the sun comes up, to get to the set for that first scene. But listen—my father is from Missouri. Could we be related? Would you write to me (in care of FAMILY WEEKLY) and tell me about your family?

FOR KAY BALLARD

● I don't understand them. If I had told my parents I was "finding myself," the way kids do today, I'd have gotten a whack where it hurt most. When I was five, I knew what I wanted to do. I sang while I did the dishes and acted on Cleveland streetcars—and I talked my way into a job as a theater usherette. The manager knew I was too young, but he relented because I told him I was supporting my "starving family."

FOR GLEN CAMPBELL

Of all your concerts, which was the most memorable?—A.J.N., Louisville, Ky.

● One I gave last year in Australia at a school for deaf children. As soon as I started singing, the kids clapped and swayed in time with the music. The teacher explained that though the youngsters couldn't hear, they felt the music vibrations through the floor. In a short time, the children got up and actually started dancing, keeping perfect time to the beat.

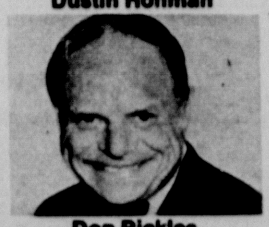

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I've heard that performers sometimes get so involved with their parts onstage that they lose contact with their own senses. True?—S.S., Miami Beach, Fla.

● Is it ever! At a Tony telecast, Zero Mostel went through his dancing paces onstage as Tevye from "Fiddler on the Roof." At the party afterward, he had to walk with the aid of a cane. . . . Dustin Hoffman once struck Lore Noto when they both did "The Diary of Anne Frank." Only when they came offstage did Noto realize his glasses were shattered from the blow and his face was bloodstained. . . . Lucille Ball did a series of commercials for the Milton Bradley Toy Co. At the final "cut" she hobbled over to a chair. She had injured her leg in an accident, but during the shooting she behaved as if the leg were okay. . . . "Just as I was going onstage," says Don Rickles, "I learned my father had died. I nodded, went out, did my act and only when I finished did that tragic blow hit me."

I want a cigarette with low tar and nicotine.
But, I also want taste. That's why I smoke
Winston Lights. I get a lighter cigarette,

Ladies—Try Cooling It!

First We Gave Advice to Husbands; Now It's the Wives' Turn...

By Dr. Alexandra Symonds
with Joan Rattner Heilman

"Your husband's silence doesn't mean he doesn't care about you, and it's important that you don't accuse him of that. Accusations and recriminations will make him draw away even farther."

A few months ago in FAMILY WEEKLY, Dr. Martin Symonds, psychoanalyst, told husbands how to begin to repair a basically good marriage that's going stale. He told men to stop being strong and silent and to start talking to their wives.

After the article appeared, FAMILY WEEKLY received a deluge of letters asking for advice for the wives. So we asked Dr. Alexandra Symonds, wife of our author and a psychoanalyst herself, to tell wives where to begin.

If you ever get the feeling your husband isn't listening to a word you're saying—that he seems "turned off," doesn't want to discuss problems you consider terribly important—you've got a lot of company. That is the Number One complaint of most wives who feel they and their husbands are drifting apart. One study shows that the comment "He doesn't talk" heads the list of complaints in over 80 percent of marriages that are getting shaky. In my own practice, I hear it constantly.

A woman often assumes that because her husband is silent, he doesn't care about her. That's where she can be wrong. If her marriage has been basically good, her husband's silence probably means merely that he is reacting to a personal anxiety in a different way than she would. Being a man, he tends to be less verbal, more detached.

Women, who have always been allowed to express their feelings, generally look for closeness in a relationship. When they are anxious about something, they want to move even closer, to talk it all out, worry over it.

Men, on the other hand, usually have been raised to hold back their feelings, to be strong and to control their emotions. This requires them to maintain a certain amount of interpersonal distance, especially when they're anxious. They're afraid they won't be able to handle their feelings. Under pressure, they want to increase that distance.

Frequently, the result is a husband who becomes more and more silent while his wife becomes more and more clutching and verbal. Both become defensive and, instead of growing together, they push each other away.

If you're the wife, it's important to know that your husband doesn't like what's happened to the marriage either. He longs for warmth and a happy relationship, but he, like many men, probably can't open up on his own. If that's the case, you must be the one to start the repair job.

Perhaps these suggestions from my experience in working with many husbands and wives will help:

1. Don't take it personally. For whatever reasons, men do feel and behave differently from women. Your husband's silence doesn't mean he doesn't care about you, and it's important that you don't accuse him of that. Accusations and recriminations will make him draw away even farther.

If he is like most men, he can't even listen to your hurt feelings. He reacts to the anger and the accusation, and doesn't hear your content. He insulates himself against it because your hurt means to him: "You did something terrible to me and now you've got to fix it."

If you want to tell him how you feel, just tell him. Leave the hurt out of it. One way is to use the word "I" instead of "you." "I feel terrible when . . . ," rather than "Why don't you ever. . . . ?"

2. Accept the fact that your husband will never be as verbal as your best girl friend. He will never want to know every detail of your daily life—even though he loves you. A broad outline is usually plenty for him. For your part, you don't have to tell him everything; you don't need constant contact and support every single minute. He will appreciate you more if you are your own person. If you make good contact for a short period of time, it goes a long way.

3. When you want to discuss something important, be sure you have his attention. Don't overload the circuits. Even if you must say, "I have something to discuss with you, something important to me. When's the best time to talk about it?" Then say it. Don't try to talk to him when he's tired or tense or preoccupied. Don't compete with the television set. Notify him that you want to talk. In my own marriage, I found that I had to let my husband know when I was serious and wanted his time and attention. I learned not to just shut up and simmer, but to choose my time. You can give your husband a preliminary warning, a sort of countdown: "George, I'd like to talk to you after the game is over."

4. Remember that people—husbands and wives included—don't automatically understand each other even when they love each other. They're not mind readers. Many wives feel they shouldn't have to explain their feelings to their husbands. "He should know how I feel without telling him." "If I have to tell him, it's not worth it." This probably derives from the mother-child relationship—"My mother knows I'm hungry, I don't have to tell her." But with a husband, you do have to tell, and explain, and describe. If you don't, he won't know how you feel. He won't know what pleases and displeases you, in anything from sex to which restaurant you like. In other words, in some areas you must be more verbal too.

5. Don't confuse a need for constant approval with conversation. Some women want to discuss every tiny detail of their lives—which dress they should wear, when to go to the store, etc. They think they are "making conversation," but what they are really doing is trying to find out how to behave. Their conversation has an anxious undertone of asking for permission. The husbands' usual response is to retreat—to get away from that much dependency.

6. When your husband does open his mouth to talk, listen. Don't use it as an opportunity to get going yourself, or as an opening to get back at him. I know one woman who never fails to cut off her husband by his third sentence, taking over for him. And I know another who exclaims, "What does he know!" whenever her husband ventures to speak. Yet both of these wives complain that their men never talk! How can they? It's too dangerous.

7. Let him know you appreciate him. Women aren't the only people who require approval. Men need reassurance also. Tell him you love him, that he looks handsome in his new shirt, that he's handled a difficult situation well. Don't save your comments for criticism. If you require him to be strong and "masculine" all the time, as many women do, he'll learn to hide his vulnerabilities from you.

8. Realize your husband would dearly love to go back to the relationship you once had, to talk and share your lives together. If you give him room to do it, I know you'll be surprised at the results.

At last! Doctor reveals new 6-days-a-week diet that Doesn't Just Shrink Fat Cells, But Destroys Them!

Controversial? Yes! But it may also be the most important reducing discovery of our day! Because here at last is a simple diet that doesn't just empty out the contents of those ugly fat cells, distributed all over your body...but can actually destroy, in case after case, the fat-cells themselves!

So—this time—when you start eating normally again, there can be no place for that new fat to stay in your body! It can't be drawn up into those empty fat cells as though they were miniature sponges! And you don't blow up like a balloon once you've stopped dieting!

And Best Of All, You Eat Whatever You Want! Anything At All You Want! One Full Day A Week!

So you never really give up a single one of your favorite foods at all! You never really miss the ice cream . . . chocolate . . . pastries . . . desserts . . . pasta . . . creams and sauces . . . and every other single one of the dishes you love now! NONE of them are cut out of your diet! Any one of them you want—any combination of them you want—are completely allowed on that one "FREE DAY" every week!

And You Get Your Choice Of HOW FAST You Want To Peel Off The Weight!

And remember, with this diet you are not just losing liquid fat—the content of those ugly fat cells that have swelled your body since you were a child—but you can now actually dissolve those very cell walls themselves!

It's exactly as though your body—like the body of every naturally overweight person—had millions upon millions of tiny fat-sponges distributed all over it! And when you over-eat, these tiny sponges "soak up" the excess fat that's carried to them by your bloodstream!

Now you can see why ordinary diets don't last! Because, when you go on an ordinary diet, no matter how torturous it is, that ordinary diet is designed simply to drain out the liquid fat from the INSIDE of those "sponge" cells! It's exactly as though you'd squeezed them dry! They shrink alright! But the "sponge" cells themselves are still there, waiting to soak up MORE AND MORE NEW FAT, once you go off that diet and begin eating normally again!

But Dr. Collins' diet works on an entirely different principle! It is specifically designed to eliminate the building blocks of those cells, at exactly the same time that it eliminates the liquid fat stored within them! So both liquid and solid fat pour out of your body at the same time! The "sponge" is destroyed right along with ugly liquid that swelled it up! And—this time—(to quote Dr. Collins himself), "When you resume a normal diet, you will STAY THIN more consistently"! (Emphasis ours.)

Ingenious? Yes! But Still Only The Beginning! Because The Real Pay-Off Comes Now—In The Breathtaking New Flood Of Health That Pours In To Your Entire Body!

For you must understand this—Dr. Collins developed this powerful diet as only one part of an all-over HOME HEALTH PLAN, designed to give average man and woman, everywhere, who are worried about their weight or any other threat to their continued good health, SIMPLE MEDICAL TOOLS THAT GIVE THEM, AT HOME, NEW MEDICAL POWER TO DEAL WITH THEM!

Yes, Dr. Collins gives you, not only new weight-control, but new disease-control . . . new pain-control . . . new infection-control . . . new fatigue-control! Administered by yourself, at home, with startling results, in case after case, like this:

For each of the major and minor diseases that may attack you or your family, Dr. Collins tell you at a glance: what really causes it . . . how to prevent it . . . how to treat it if it should strike . . . and (perhaps most important of all) when you should do absolutely nothing, leave it alone, and let your body get rid of it itself!

For example—

Most people think severe chest pain is the first warning sign of serious lung or heart disease, and therefore run immediately to their doctors. Dr. Collins, however, gives you a simple 30-second test to help rule out heart trouble! And then goes on to how an incredibly easy adjustment to your body may make that pain evaporate—for good!

Most people spend small fortunes trying to overcome chronic constipation, and go through needless agony that only grows worse and worse every year! Dr. Collins shows you a simple way to substitute natural food for those harmful laxatives, and let gastrocolic reflexes give you the relief you want—in many cases, almost immediately! And with no harmful side effects!

Yes, most people never dream of the simple dietary way to banish excruciating migraine pain . . . or how you can let your rheumatoid arthritis burn itself out, without treatment, and without drugs . . . or why many diabetics can treat themselves (unbelievable? See page 148) . . . or how 70% to 80% of kidney stones don't have to be operated on at all to stop them from causing pain . . . or how even an episode of multiple sclerosis can often be coaxed to clear itself up, with nothing more than the gentlest home treatment!

But The List Of Pain-Saving, Health-Saving, Dollar-Saving New Revelations Goes On And On! For Example . . .

Why, and when, you may not need a doctor to relieve: Acute diarrhea (as long as there is no temperature) . . . upset stomach . . . most hay fever . . . shingles . . . hemorrhoids . . . dizziness . . . athlete's foot . . . acne . . . gout . . . even to a great extent asthma, and many more—if you know the right way to do it!

World's most effective way to relieve fatigue—without getting more sleep or spending one cent for medical or psychiatric treatments!

What you can do to prevent pneumonia! And tuberculosis! And high blood cholesterol!

A new, superfast treatment for hangover—far more powerful than any other you can use!

And More! And More! And More! Everything You Want To Know To Protect Your Vitality and Health! PLUS THE REVOLUTIONARY NEW DIET THAT GIVES YOU BACK THE FIGURE OF YOUR DREAMS . . . FOR GOOD!

Once again, perhaps the best way to prove the overwhelming benefits this book will give you, is simply to turn at once to page 88, and start on the most exciting new diet of your entire life!

Remember, THIS diet not only drains out the liquid fat from your body, but can actually destroy the fat cells themselves! And does it, without your giving up a single one of the foods you love on that blissful Free Day each week!

And then imagine HOW MUCH BETTER YOU'LL FEEL AT EXACTLY THE SAME TIME—because THIS book not only takes care of your fat-problem, but most of your other health problems as well!

Smart Cooking
Day Before Payday

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen comes to the rescue of strapped housewives with a tasty casserole from Greece that requires no costly meat.

From Greece: Delicious, Money-Saving Moussaka

Meatless Moussaka is a low-cost dish that you just might want to make into a "staple" for your family.

MEATLESS MOUSSAKA

Boiling, salted water
2 eggs
1 cup cooked white or brown rice
2 cups cottage cheese
½ cup instant nonfat dry milk powder
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sage leaves
1⅔ cups (15-oz. jar) meatless spaghetti sauce
6 ozs. sliced mozzarella cheese

1. Preheat oven to 375°F. Peel eggplant and slice in ¼-inch-thick slices. Drop slices into rapidly boiling salted water; cover and boil 4 minutes. Drain on paper towels.
2. Beat eggs lightly in medium bowl. Add rice, cottage cheese, nonfat dry milk powder, onion, salt and sage leaves; stir to mix.
3. Spread ½ cup spaghetti sauce in bottom of 11x7x2-inch baking dish. Make layers of one-half eggplant, cottage cheese mixture and sauce. Repeat, finishing with sauce.
4. Cut mozzarella into strips. Top sauce with mozzarella cheese strips in a lattice pattern.
5. Bake 30-40 minutes, until bubbly.

Makes 4-5 servings

WHAT'S SMART:

Not only does Meatless Moussaka save you money on meat, it saves you money on milk. Our supply of nonfat dry milk is a whopping 103 percent higher than a year ago. So prices in your store should be low. Dry milk is a good nutrition buy. Properly packaged and stored, it retains its quality for about six months. It's a good idea to cut the kids' milk with nonfat dry milk or reconstituted liquid skim milk. Saves calories and cost.

Bell Shown Actual Size

PAUL REVERE rode in 1775 to foil British plans for a surprise attack at Lexington and Concord. Since then, the clatter of his horse's hoofbeats has echoed through the centuries. His ride remains a stirring and fateful moment in the history of America—a reminder of the brave men who risked their lives and fortunes so that we might be free today.

Now, as the world celebrates 200 years of American freedom, we re-dedicate ourselves to the American ideal by recalling the proud deeds of patriots such as Paul Revere. To commemorate the 200th anniversary of his ride, The Danbury Mint will issue its first Bicentennial Bell.

This beautiful porcelain heirloom will be available only briefly in a limited edition which closes forever on July 31, 1975. After that date, this first Bicentennial Bell will be available only from original owners willing to part with it, and only at their asking price, whatever that might be.

Experience suggests that few of these bells will ever reach the open market. Most will be kept as prized reminders of our nation's Bicentennial, and proudly passed on to future generations of Americans.

How to Handle People Who Want to Borrow Money From You

True or False: If you loan money to a person who is habitually tense and anxious, you seldom need to be concerned about his paying you back as promised—he is the worrying type and it gives him ulcers if he doesn't pay up promptly. (See number 4)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If an acquaintance you don't want to offend hits you for a loan, there isn't much you can do about it.

2. If you make a personal loan to someone and he doesn't pay it back when promised, it's easy to put the pressure on him for payment without causing hard feelings.

3. Before you let a would-be borrower get his hand in your pocket there are several things you should consider.

4. If you loan money to a person who is habitually tense and anxious, you seldom need to be concerned about his paying you back as promised—he is the worrying type and it gives him ulcers if he doesn't pay up promptly.

5. The more you think of a person, the more you should try to avoid putting him under obligation to you by loaning him money.

ANSWERS

1. False. One of the best ways to handle such a situation is indicated by the findings of psychological studies at the University of Wisconsin. First, listen attentively as the hard-luck-story artist waxes eloquent. But stop him before he has you reaching for your checkbook, and say to him in sincere and sympathetic tones: "I'm sorry, Jack. I certainly appreciate your situation, but my wife handles all the finances—so you'll have to talk to her." Most characters who are looking for an easy "touch" are completely disconcerted by this tactic, and they hesitate to approach a man's wife for money. Anyway, you know your wife wouldn't turn loose with a shekel. (If you're not sure, substitute "my business manager" or "my accountant" for wife.)

2. True. Here's the way you handle it. Let's say he wants to borrow $100 for a month, or whatever. You tell him: "I can't spare it myself, but I can get it for you from my bank. But of course they'll insist that it be paid back on time." If the friend doesn't return the loan when promised, you can tell him you've got to have the money, as the "bank" is pressuring you for immediate payment. That makes them the villain, not you. (Another good thing about this system is that someone is much more apt to repay a loan when promised if he feels you're getting it for him from a "coldhearted" bank or lending institution.)

3. True. When an acquaintance wants to use some of your hard-earned money to bail out of a financial strait that he got himself into, it's a good idea to ask him if he's tried a bank and other loan agencies that are equipped to serve borrowers. If he hasn't, suggest that he try them. If he has, and they've turned him down, then let your judgment be your guide—but remember he's a worse risk for you than for them.

4. False. University studies have demonstrated that people of nervous and highstrung temperament are by no means the most honest when it comes to paying their debts. While some are extremely trustworthy, others are the kind of conniving deadbeats you might expect to find signing promissory notes with invisible ink. The personality types who are the best risks are people of calm temperament, who are seldom given to nervousness or anxiety.

5. True. Psychological studies show that though he may be grateful for the loan, the obligation that goes hand in hand with being in another person's debt tends to make most people feel resentful and uncomfortable. And such feelings are markedly increased if—as is too often the case—there is some difficulty in repaying the loan. The borrower-lender relationship does more to put a strain on friendships than to strengthen them.

Her father works as a day laborer on construction sites, but his earnings are small and often he cannot find any work at all. Rosa's mother peddles lemons and garlic in the streets to help earn money for food.

Rosa's parents try hard to provide for her and their other four children. Our overseas report says the children have "very poor clothing" but they are "clean and neat, not only in their attire but in their persons."

Now Rosa has a chance for a better life in spite of her hardships. With help from her CCF sponsor here in the United States, she can get an education. And with an education she has a chance to break the poverty cycle—to escape from the dismal slum where she lives.

Rosa and her sponsor exchange letters and the little girl looks forward to receiving them. To her, they mean her sponsor loves her and cares about what happens to her.

But what about other children trapped by poverty? What will happen to them? Rosa is only one example of thousands of children around the world who are waiting for someone to care.

Your love can make the difference. Through the Christian Children's Fund, you can sponsor a needy child like Rosa for only $15 a month (about 50¢ a day) and begin a person-to-person relationship with the child assigned to you.

What does your sponsorship actually do for a child? Well, each child is helped according to his own needs. If the youngster lives in a children's Home, you will be helping supply food, clothing and medical care. If the child is enrolled in one of our Family Helper Projects, your sponsorship will help provide school supplies, clothing, medical assistance, emergency food and shelter, and family guidance from a trained child care worker. Won't you share your blessings with a child who needs help?

Just fill out the coupon and send it with your first monthly check. In about two weeks you will receive the child's photograph, name and mailing address, as well as a detailed description of the project where the child receives assistance.

You may write to your sponsored child and your letters will be answered. You will get the child's original letter along with an English translation. (Children unable to write are assisted by family members or staff workers.)

Your love can make a big difference in the life of a needy little child. Please, fill out the coupon now . . .

Jazz on the Comeback Trail

Yank Lawson

Bob Haggart

Lionel Hampton

Dizzy Gillespie

Herbie Hancock

Transworld Features

What are those two board members—the Establishment types at the conference table — doing with a trumpet on our cover? Is their conglomerate going into the record business, or is their bank backing a band? They are a band? The leaders of a band? The World's Greatest Jazzband? You're putting us on!

Everyone knows that jazz musicians are wild-eyed, freaked-out, hard-drinking dopers. (Did you think rock musicians invented that life-style?) But these cats look like the soberest judges in the court. Once they were the young, hell-raising heart of the late-thirties-early-forties Bob Crosby crew that brought the New Orleans idiom into a big-band context. But if jazzmen surmount the rigors of their life to survive past 40, they eventually mellow like the rest of us mere mortals.

Don't be fooled by the look of respectability worn by trumpeter Yank Lawson and bassist Bob Haggart. When it comes to the music, they treat it with the proper dedication. Perhaps no trails are being blazed, but the fire is there in both the old and new that comprise their repertoire.

The old might be Haggart's "South Rampart Street Parade" or "Wolverine Blues"; the new could be a current pop tune like "Windmills of Your Mind," or a recent original by Haggart or reedman Bob Wilber, who left in January to form his own "Soprano Summit."

The WGJB developed out of a series of jazz parties given by investment banker Dick Gibson in Colorado during the sixties. When the band officially went to work as a unit in late 1968 at New York's Riverboat Restaurant, it was Gibson who managed its affairs, supplied financial backing and bestowed on it the outrageously boastful name that Haggart says the members "found a little overwhelming." It was an all-star band that played together and, for the most part, stayed together. These days it has trimmed down to seven pieces from the original nine. Its new, second mentor, Bark Hickox, also operates the World Jazz label for which the group records.

If the audience for the WGJB was essentially an older crowd, many of whom were followers from the Crosby, Dorsey, Goodman and Shaw days, that was dictated by the kinds of rooms the band played as well as the stylistic orientation. But when young people were exposed to the band, the reaction was enthusiastically positive. Kids were not necessarily as turned on by the band's interpretation of "Mrs. Robinson" as they were by the sense of discovery in hearing "Savoy Blues" for the first time.

A couple of semesters ago I taught a jazz-history course at City College in New York. Many of my students were remarkably ready to accept all varieties of jazz. Some came with a knowledge of—or liking for—jazz, but slanted toward the late saxophonist John Coltrane, a dominant voice in the 1960's who continues to cast a giant shadow. Most of the undergraduates were rock people, as might be expected. But rock, which took over the world music stage in the mid-sixties, lost much of its momentum near mid-decade in the seventies. The teenage audience started to look for alternatives. Many began with an interest in some of the earliest forms of jazz, not too surprising when you consider that one of the basic roots of rock—the blues—is also a vital element in jazz.

The seventies has seen a revival of ragtime, a direct antecedent of jazz. Nonagenarian pianist Eubie Blake, composer of "I'm Just Wild About Harry" and "Memories of You," has been filling concert halls and guesting on late-night TV talk shows. Classical pianists have been delving into ragtime—for better or for worse—and Gunther Schuller recorded Scott Joplin's music with his New England Conservatory ensemble. Joplin, the "king of the ragtime composers," was being rediscovered, reaching a peak when "The Entertainer" made the charts after its prominent feature in the Academy Award winning film, "The Sting."

"Kids were not necessarily as turned on by the band's interpretation of 'Mrs. Robinson' as they were by the sense of discovery in hearing 'Savoy Blues' for the first time."

I don't know if we're going to see a rapid recycling of the entire jazz tradition, but pianist Bob Greene has recreated Jelly Roll Morton's Red Hot Peppers; a California-based group named Supersax has done three albums in which Charlie Parker's alto saxophone solos have been transcribed from the original '40's and '50's recordings and tailored for a full, five-man sax section; and the Pointer Sisters unearthed "Salt Peanuts," the old Parker-Dizzy Gillespie vehicle, using a simplified version of the Lambert, Hendricks & Ross method of fitting words to already recorded instrumental solos.

Today's vanguard mixes black pride, anger and alienation with ethereal "space" trips and the electric heritage of rock. It includes Coltrane-inspired saxophonist Pharoah Sanders, who mixes a pastoral, Pan-African feeling with harsh, grinding notes; and several brilliant pianist-composers such as Keith Jarrett, Chic Corea and McCoy Tyner. One of the most commercially successful albums of 1974 was "Headhunters" by Herbie Hancock, another pianist-composer who formerly played with Miles Davis's group. Utilizing the synthesizer and various percussive devices, the record climbed to the top of the jazz charts. But is it jazz or merely electrified rhythm-and-blues rock?

With the success of "Headhunters" and similar efforts, many people began screaming about a new popularity for jazz. This was recording-industry mentality talking, however. Drummer-leader Jack De Johnette, who has worked with many important players, including Miles Davis (a jazz giant who has also succumbed to rock banality), is upset by this trend. "It has produced sort of a commercial sound," he says, "somewhere between rock and jazz. To be honest, I find it hard to distinguish one band from another."

The commercial success of the more obvious kind of fare notwithstanding, purer jazz forms are finding their way to a new, larger audience. On an academic level there is more jazz history being taught in the colleges, and recreations of great works of the past are being done in concert by organizations like the New York Jazz Repertory Company and the National Jazz Ensemble, each in its second season. The Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., has jazz as a regular part of its concert series and has issued a six-record "Collection of Classic Jazz" that it sells by mail. In the retail record stores, bootleg issues of rare material vie with legitimate reissues for the consumer dollar. One bootlegger has even been ripping off the other record pirates and underselling them with their own product.

Jazz of all persuasions has proliferated in New York during the last few years. Drummer Buddy Rich has opened a large nightclub (Buddy's Place) on Manhattan's West Side. Sixty-seven-year-old Lionel Hampton recently shared billing with Bette Midler in a lavish Broadway revue. Analysts point to the summer of 1972 and the switch of the Newport Jazz Festival from Rhode Island to Manhattan as a major catalyst in this resurgence. But it is also possible to say that four years earlier, when things were at their lowest ebb, The World's Greatest Jazzband was one of the factors in helping to get jazz—the music and the name—into the public consciousness again. Lawson and Haggart, whether or not they knew it, were bridge builders over the generation gap.

This Year's great new Decorating "Trend"

Handcrafted 3-Dimensional Metal Sculptures

"Fisherman's Wharf"
12¼"x23½"

"Victorian House"
13¼"x 20"

"Windmill"
19¼"x 11½"

"Railroad Station" (13½"x19½")

No Two Exactly Alike- Each an Original Work of Art Each an Impressive Size

Romantic, nostalgic 3-dimensional metal wall sculptures are the very latest decorating trend, and are selling from about $60 up to $190 in better stores. The price tag on a similar piece to "Fisherman's Wharf" (shown at top of ad) is $160! And frankly, if immodestly, we feel our interpretation is prettier – cleaner in line, purer in execution. Each of our versions is guaranteed electroplated with Copper – cut, stamped, hammered, antiqued, welded and color-brushed all by hand and ready to hang. No two are exactly alike, and each is an original work of art. At only $14.99 apiece, they are bound to sell out fast. To avoid disappointment, please order at once.

What in the World!

CYBILL SHEPHERD
But not (Cybill Shepherd)

The famous cover-girl-actress talks about the Hollywood woman: "Nudity has virtually destroyed women's mystique because nudity itself is not sensual. It's awkward and usually boring. As for myself, I don't have to worry about that problem—I still epitomize the all-American girl, and my screen image can best be defined as 'pure vanilla.'" Ms. Shepherd feels very strongly about maintaining her identity: "For me, marriage is a false security, and I have no intention of ever being listed in the gossip columns as 'Mrs. Peter Bogdanovich (Cybill Shepherd).' What thinking woman wants to be relegated to parentheses?" She also bemoans the prejudice directed against single and divorced women in Hollywood. "Women are finally getting up the courage to follow their passions, and what do they get for it? They get snubbed and slighted," said Ms. Shepherd. "I remember watching Ali MacGraw's decline with incredible fascination and anger. When she was married to producer Robert Evans, she was the toast of the town. But when she left Evans for Steve McQueen, you weren't even allowed to mention her name at a dinner party!" Cybill is currently starring in "At Long Last Love" with Burt Reynolds.

What? Borrow a guinea pig? Yes. And from the library too. Public libraries in Gross Pointe, Mich., Canal Fulton, Ohio, and Cohoes, N.Y., lend power tools to community residents. The Minneapolis Public Library lends toys to children. But the Erie, Pa., Metropolitan Library boasts one of the most unusual lending services of all: Its Children's Division lends guinea pigs to children for one-week periods, and in the near future will be offering rats and mice. Not only is a child lent an animal, but also a cage, bedding, food and a care-and-feeding instruction list. Also the young borrower must meet with the children's librarian for a preliminary discussion on handling and caring for the animal. There's only one difference between animal and book borrowing—the former is not renewable.

SUMMER SKIING CITY-STYLE
Downhill is treacherous

Dr. John Stephens doesn't need snow to ski on. An avid cross-country skier and physical-fitness disciple, Stephens found that for the warmer months, roller skis suit his purpose just fine. Roller skis are made of aluminum, consist of three wheels (one in front, two in back) and are fitted with a nonreturn ratchet so they won't go in reverse. "I even use them to travel to work when I'm running late and the traffic is bad," said Stephens. "They do pose one problem, however: Going uphill is easy, but since they're not equipped with brakes, going downhill can be treacherous!"

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

ON BREAKING GLASSES

Two kinds of glassware we possess—
What kinds they are, you may well guess.
One is the sturdy, soundly made.
Which, oddly, is the lower grade;
The other is the fragile, weak,
The costly kind collectors seek.

The cheap when dropped will bounce and roll.
An accident will take no toll.
The arty sort that takes a tumble
Is sure to splinter, crack and crumble.
Why can't the fine, not cheap, be strong?
It seems to me that something's wrong.

The office Don Juan lost no time in trying to impress the new secretary. He launched into a recital of his accomplishments on the college football team, the dance floor, in the Navy and every other line of activity he could think of. At the end of his lengthy monologue, the girl gazed at him wide-eyed and asked quietly: "Have you ever had a group portrait taken of yourself?"

So We Want You To Wear These Distinguished Gemfire Simulated Diamond Rings FREE

EACH RING GIFT BOXED

For 30 Days... No Risk... Or Obligation!

IMPORTANT:

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL YOUR GEMFIRE DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY.

A. Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets — just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.

B. Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.

C. Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity — are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!

WORDS AND PICTURES

Words and pictures don't begin to show the beauty, brilliance, and fire of these magnificent Gemfire rings. That's why we want you to wear them and judge them on their own merits — not on what we tell you. See if your friends and family can tell them from an expensive "natural" diamond worth 100 times as much. In all probability you can fool them if you want to. Not many people can tell these brilliant Gemfire simulates from the expensive real ones. Yet now you can own these beautiful rings at amazingly low prices.

LOW PRICE DOESN'T MEAN LOW QUALITY.

Gemfire simulated diamonds are not cheap fakes. In fact, Gemfires are carefully cut and polished by skilled craftsmen in the same manner as natural diamonds. They have 58 facets — just like natural diamonds. They are hand set in heavy 18Kt-HGE (heavy gold electroplate), or solid sterling silver by master craftsmen. They shine like a $1,000 diamond — but cost less than $50.00.

EVEN MILLIONAIRES

Wear Simulated Diamonds. Today many wealthy people, TV and movie stars feel unsafe making public appearances wearing expensive jewelry. Oftentimes they keep their diamonds in a safe deposit box and wear these master-crafted Gemfire simulated diamonds and impress your friends!

AN EXCITING GIFT FOR SOMEONE SPECIAL

These Gemfire rings make a much appreciated gift for a special someone in your life. They will last a lifetime. Give for birthdays, anniversaries or just as a wonderful surprise. And even if you choose to tell, your loved one will be amazed and proud that you were clever enough to find such an expensive-looking ring at these remarkably low prices. The difference between it and a natural diamond could make a down payment on a new car, or home, or even a wonderful vacation for just you two!

With Our Guarantee You Take No Risks.

If at the end of 30 days you are not completely satisfied, return by INSURED MAIL for purchase price refund. At any time, or for any reason, and in any condition, you may return your Gemfire simulated diamond by INSURED MAIL for FREE replacement.

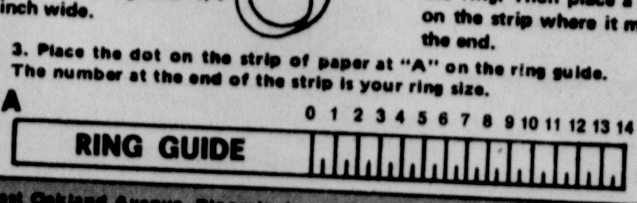

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

'Big Red Machine' incredible to Sparky

Progress Bulletin
Sports
Pomona, California ■ Tuesday, July 8, 1975

By The Associated Press

The Big Red Machine is in high gear, rolling along so smoothly that even the man at the controls can't quite believe it.

"It's incredible," said Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson after his Reds' latest triumph, a 7-3 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies Monday night. That gave Cincinnati four wins in a row, seven in the last eight games and an amazing record of 35 victories in 44 outings dating back to May 21.

"No one is supposed to win like that," added Anderson. But the Reds are doing it, and as a result have opened a gaping 8½-game bulge over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Chicago Cubs 5-0, the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 3-1, the Houston Astros defeated the Montreal Expos 5-1 and the St. Louis Cardinals outscored the San Francisco Giants 8-6.

What turned the Reds, stumbling along at the .500 mark seven weeks ago, into the winningest team in the majors?

"You've got to go back to the move—shifting Pete Rose to third," said Anderson. "It's not just that one thing, but that set off a lot of other things that happened. Getting George Foster's bat in there has been tremendous."

The move of Rose doubly strengthend the club. Rose provided the best third base play Cincinnati has had in quite a while, and Foster has blossomed as a regular outfielder, batting .283 with 15 homers.

But the big blast of the game came in the first inning, off the bat of Tony Perez. The Reds' slugging first baseman got ahold of a Steve Carlton delivery and deposited it in the upper tier of Riverfront Stadium, more than 500 feet away.

"That's the best I can hit one—I was only worried it might go foul," said Perez of his 11th homer, a two-run shot to left.

Only three fair balls have been hit into Riverfront's upper deck, and Perez now has smacked two of them. The other was by Bob Bailey.

Perez said, however, that it was not his longest home run. That distinction belongs to a ball he hit in Milwaukee in 1965, which completely cleared the left field stands.

"I want to go to the All-Star Game (in Milwaukee next week) so I can show Joe Morgan and Davey Concepcion— but I don't think they're going to believe me," Perez said. "But Pete Rose was there. He's a witness."

As for the Reds' 35-9 tear, Perez says it's no fluke.

"The way we are playing now, I think we can beat anybody," he said. "Everybody picks everybody else up."

Astros 5, Expos 1

Houston got only four hits against Montreal, but all came in the fourth inning when the Astros sent 10 men to the plate and scored all their runs. Wilbur Howard's two-run single capped the uprising in support of Larry Dierker, who scattered eight hits.

Howard has batted .372 and hit safely in eight of nine games since being inserted in the starting lineup by Manager Preston Gomez.

"He is the only player on the club I can truthfully say I haven't given a chance to play until now," said Gomez. "Jose Cruz won the right field job in spring training and we had Cesar Cedeno in center and Greg Gross in left. When Cedeno got hurt (a pulled hamstring), I put Howard in there and he's been hitting ever since."

Mets 3, Braves 1

Home runs by Rusty Staub and Dave Kingman backed the six-hit pitching of rookie Hank Webb, who posted his second major league victory—both over Atlanta.

"I needed this game," said Webb. "It's my first complete game in the big leagues, and it builds my confidence. There are such good pitchers on this staff, when I do get in I like to contribute."

Cards 8, Giants 6

Ted Simmons drove in three runs and Luis Melendez' triple highlighted a four-run first inning for the Cards, who collected six hits off Giants starter Mike Caldwell, 5-8, in the opening inning.

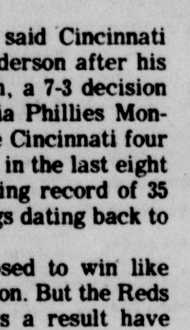

Afterwards, Giants Manager Wes Westrum became enraged at a question put to him by a local reporter, shouted and cursed at the writer and had him ejected from the San Francisco clubhouse.

Pirates 5, Cubs 0

Al Oliver belted a three-run homer and Ken Brett, Ramon Hernandez and Dave Giusti combined to stop the Cubs on five hits, all singles.

It was the 14th game in 11 days between the two clubs, and the Pirates won 11 of the meetings.

Angels have more new faces

The revolving door at Anaheim Stadium is spinning so fast these days players are being chewed up faster than rosters can be revised.

Operating in a style reminiscent of Sportshirt Bill Veeck, the Angels, since Dick Williams arrival, have just about had three teams at a time.

One is the team on the field. One is on the plane going out and the third is on the plane coming in.

It was only a week ago Sunday that the Halos closed out a disasterous (3-6) homestand with their seventh straight loss. They're back from a good (5-3) roadtrip now and open a brief six-game stand tonight.

Once again the "Kiddie Korps" will present a flock of new faces. Gone from the cast that closed a week ago are shortstops Billy Smith and Orlando Ramirez, pitcher Luis Quintana and catcher Andy Etchebarren.

New catcher due

Since that leaves Ellie Rodriguez as the only catcher, still another receiver, probably Ike Hampton from Salt Lake City, will be on hand by the time tonight's game begins.

The others were simply tired and found wanting. Smith and Ramirez committed 28 errors between them. Quintana couldn't get anybody out.

Williams promised that this year's team would be fast. But nobody knew that meant coming and going as well as playing!

Hudson is a lefthanded knuckleballer. Hockenberry is righthanded. It is hope. It is hoped that first impressions are deceiving. Otherwise the pair promises to further the notorious tradition of the "arson squad."

Hudson is sporting an 11.58 earned run average. Hockenberry's is even higher, a stratospheric 13.50!

Nonetheless, the Angels had a successful roadtrip and concluded it with back-to-back shutouts of the World Champion Oakland Athletics.

Baltimore and Cleveland are in for three games each during the brief stand. Last time the Indians were here, manager Frank Robinson was under suspension and could not play or manage.

NOT IN TIME

3 Dodgers, Ryan on 'Stars

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mike Marshall, last year's Cy Young Award winner, and two other Dodgers have been named to the nine-man National League All-Star pitching staff to face eight American League hurlers in the July 15 All-Star Game.

Los Angeles Manager Walter Alston on Monday announced his choice of Marshall, honored last year for his consistent relief pitching efforts, along with Dodger starting pitchers Andy Messersmith and Don Sutton, 12-8, to the National League All-Stars, who have won three straight mid-season classics.

Alston, manager of the National League All-Star team, also named Tom Seaver and southpaw teammate Jon Matlack of New York, lefthander Tug McGraw of Philadelphia, lefty Randy Jones of San Diego, southpaw Jerry Reuss of Pittsburgh and Phil Niekro of Atlanta.

The four National League southpaws and five right-handers will face an American League pitching crew including Vida Blue and Rollie Fingers of Oakland, Catfish Hunter of New York, Jim Kaat and Rich Gossage of Chicago, Nolan Ryan of California, Jim Palmer of Baltimore and Steve Busby of Kansas City.

All but two of the National League choices are repeaters on the All-Star squad. The exceptions are southpaws Jones and Reuss. Seaver's selection marks his eighth return to the squad.

Of the American League All-Star choices for the midseason classic at Milwaukee's County Stadium, Fingers, Hunter and Busby are repeaters from last year.

Seaver had the best winning percentage among the NL pitchers with a 12-4 record and an ERA of 1.85. Messersmith was 12-5 with a 2.08 average and Jones showed an 11-5 record and a stingy 1.77 ERA.

Marshall, who has a 3-5 record with four saves, and McGraw, 5-4 with eight saves, are the only two relief specialists representing the NL.

Reuss' record is 9-6 and Niekro's record is 8-7.

American team tied for first

PRAGUE, Czechoslovokia (AP) — An American track and field team, rebounding from a dismal showing against the Soviet Union, was today tied with Poland after the first day of a two-day duel meet.

The American men grabbed victories in seven of 12 events for a one-point lead over the Polish team, while the American women trailed their Polish counterparts by an equally slender one point. The Polish women captured four of seven events.

For the Americans, the surprise hero was unsung Dave Babiracki of Grenada Hills, Calif., who won the 10,000 meters in his first competition over that distance.

He started to change that situation by unleashing a powerful finishing kick to outrun Poland's Henry Nogala by three seconds.

A repeat of their last road trip would kill any chances they have of catching the Cincinnati Reds in the National League West.

The Dodgers lost seven of 11 games during that trip, including four in a row to finish the tour at San Francisco, and fell from two games behind the Reds to seven games back.

Despite winning five of the seven games at home, the Dodgers still start this six game trip trailing Cincinnati by eight.

"It's nice to get out of the slump and win a few," Dodger Manager Walter Alston said.

"That doesn't mean were out of it completely, but it is nice."

Alston said he thinks the 1975 Pirates "may be a little better" than they were when they won the National League East last season.

"They are dynamite with the bat," said Alston, "and you'd better hope you get pretty good pitching to stop them."

Ruffian was just too much horse

NEW YORK (AP) — Ruffian, the fabulous filly whose life was filled with the sounds of cheering and victory, has been laid to rest in the quiet of darkness.

Ruffian was buried at Belmont Park Monday night before a small, subdued gathering that included her trainer, Frank Whiteley, and her last rider, Jacinto Vasquez.

"Frank Whiteley requested that we make it as private as possible and we think that is only right," said New York Racing Association Board Chairman Jack Dreyfus Jr. "This most certainly is not a happy occasion."

Only a few friends of racing came to watch Ruffian's private burial at Belmont, the site of her final, abortive race. The digging, done by an automatic crane, began at sundown and ended 90 minutes later in the dead of night as Ruffian was lowered into the ground on Belmont's infield.

The burial party dropped a bouquet of roses into the grave, the final resting place for the filly said by many to be the best to ever grace a racing program.

The quiet of Belmont Park Monday night provided a stark contrast to the festive atmosphere only 27 hours earlier, when Ruffian shouldered Vasquez and the hopes of millions of females against the colt Foolish Pleasure.

A nationwide television audience—millions of people—saw Ruffian break down a half mile into the $350,000 match race, a victim of a shattered right ankle, as Foolish Pleasure raced on to a less-tragic finish line. Barely a score saw her buried.

Ruffian underwent an operation late Sunday night but in the end, this magnificent competitor, who was too much horse for every filly she ever raced, proved too much horse for herself.

Upon awakening from the anesthesia, she lashed out and smashed her cast, causing severe damage to the injured leg. "The cast had become an entangled mess and there was intensive swelling and hemorrhaging," said Dr. Alex Harthill, part of the veterinarian team that worked feverishly to save Ruffian.

It was then that Ruffian, who was always favored to win on the track, became a longshot to live. "If we were to put her through anesthesia and another operation, it would only be worse the next time, Harthill said."

Dr. Willam O. Reed, another veterinarian who joined the fight to save Ruffian, agreed, predicting the outcome of Ruffian's race against death shortly after the surgery was over.

"One of her problems was her personality," he said. "She is a big, robust filly who may tend to fight harder because of her desire. For her, that could prove dangerous."

If Ruffian had not been such a splendid race horse, she may have been put to sleep immediately after the injury. But extensive efforts were made to save the 3-year-old filly, victorious in all 10 races before Sunday, because of the hope she could transmit some of her greatness to her offspring.

Two other horses, Hoist the Flag and Spanish Riddle—both males—are alive today following long operations for leg injuries. They are standing at stud.

"It's a far cry from 10 years ago," Kramer said. "There have been tremendous advances in long bone surgery in horses, acceleraed by the bone plating technique developed by the Swiss."

Ruffian was recently insured for an undisclosed sum, which most horse insurance brokers felt was not near the million-dollar policy taken out on Foolish Pleasure.

Had she finished her racing career uninjured, Ruffian would not have been as valuable as a colt of similar talents. A mare can have only one foal a year and about eight or nine in her lifetime. But a sire can service 30-35 mares a year.

After the burial, which was shielded from the press by a dozen uniformed Pinkertons and a blackout of the track's lights, Vasquez said "the most vivid thing I remember was that snap." He was referring to the deadly sound that accompanied the break.

And few people in attendance at Belmont Park Sunday will forget the sound of spirited cheering that was transformed at the three-quarters pole into a hollow hush, as Ruffian's last race, which got off to a good start, ended in tragedy.

"When I saw what happened, it dumbfounded me," said LeRoy Jolley, Foolish Pleasure's trainer. "I felt a little sick. Every time you saddle a horse you say a prayer that he'll come back in one piece.

"It's a shame. The better the horse is the more he runs extremely hard. That's what makes them great. They throw everything into it and if it kills them it kills them. They'll run no matter what."

"When she came out of anesthesia, she was so eager to get up, she fought the cast right off," said Reggie Cornell, the trainer for Calumet Farm. "That's what made her a great filly. She was so determined."

Ruffian always gave everything she had. Even in death.
